——THE SCHOOL BULLETIN PUBLICATIONS——

The School Bulletin

And New York State Educational Journal

Established 1874. 24 pages, 9x14. $1.00 a year

The School Bulletin is one of the three oldest educational journals in America, and the only one of them that has been under the same ownership and management from the beginning. It was the only American school journal which received the gold medal at the Paris Exposition of 1889; it received the highest award offered at the Chicago Exposition of 1893, the diploma pronouncing it "of the greatest interest and historical value to educators of all grades"; and it received two gold medals at the Paris Exposition of 1900. Its editor had charge of the department of Educational Publications at the World's Fair Congress of 1893, and prepared the article on Educational Journalism printed in the 50th anniversary volume of the National Educational association for 1906.

In the feature of educational news it has never had a rival. Its chronicles of what has happened in New York schools since its establishment are unmatched in educational literature, and it has taken note of whatever has happened in other states that involved general principles. It is abundantly illustrated, especially in portraits, of which more than 300 have appeared in a single volume.

It also publishes the most important circulars and decisions of the Education Department, and records of the meetings held and circulars issued by the District Superintendents; in short it is indispensable to the New York teacher who would be well-informed.

Dr. Sherman Williams, Chief of School Libraries, wrote us May 25, 1913: "I have read the School Bulletin from the first number, I think. I read no other periodical with so much satisfaction. Your reports of educational meetings are not equalled by any other writer. Your general surveys of the educational field are very remarkable. Your knowledge of human nature is unusual. Your wealth of information is marvellous. All these qualities enable you to make the School Bulletin the remarkable paper that it is."

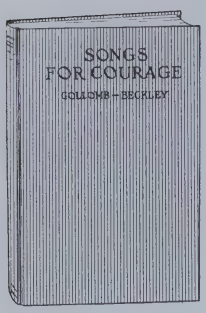
BY ZOË BECKLEY AND JOSEPH GOLLOMB.



For those to whom life has dealt heavy blows there could be no better tonic than "Songs for Courage." It is just the sort of message for one's own heart, or to pass along to a friend. Nothing is so contagious as courage; and here some of the bravest spirits, the brightest intellects, unite in this one great adjuration: Take hope!

In verse and in prose; gay, grave, majestic, but always heart-stirring because culled from living truth—resolute songs of souls who will not accept defeat—they bid us be of good cheer. "Walt Mason is the High Priest of Horse Sense."

Hon. Champ Clark:

"We need more of this kind of philosophy. Better to sing a jubilante than a misere."

Elbert Hubbard:

"His prose poems exercise your liver by making you laugh. His wit bubbles and gurgles like a Kansas creek where the bullfrogs gambol."

Walt Mason's prose poetry is perhaps the most widely read of contemporary writers. It has appeared in the leading magazines and newspapers throughout the country. William Allen White summarizes his work aptly in saying:

"How many millions of people are cheered year by year as they turn every day to those quaint verses! Here is a man doing a man's work in the world, making life brighter and more cheerful and more sensible in this vale of tears. Millions in money could do no more—if as much—as this man does at his day's work."

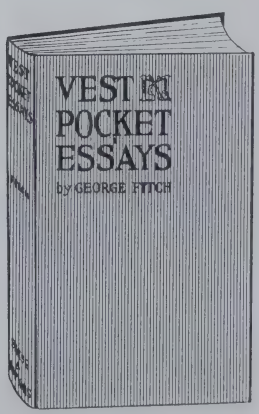
VEST POCKET ESSAYS

BY GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Siwash," etc.



"Vest Pocket Essays" are short talks—about four hundred words each—on miscellaneous subjects, "From Hope to Hash," "From Cabbages to Kings." Fitch's humor is good-natured, yet there is a wealth of meaning behind his fun. It is above all things a philosophic humor, though he is never cynically smart, and when he takes certain institutions to task he does it in a kindly manner. His is a quiet, dry, droll humor—to be consumed in leisurely fashion, rolled under the tongue and chuckled over.

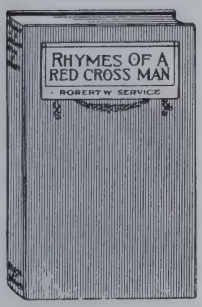
RHYMES OF A RED CROSS MAN



Cloth

BY ROBERT W. SERVICE.

Humor and Pathos of the Great War told in verses which will live after the story of the conflict is but a legend. Verses which wedge the human side of the war into the hearts of people.

Flexible Leather

These vivid pen pictures of the titanic struggle in Europe, written amid the din and roar of the cannon, tell the story of the human side of this great war in the most inspired, straightforward, and powerful verses that have yet been contributed. Mr. Witter Bynner, literary critic of "The Dial," aptly concludes:

> "Detail after detail of life at the front takes its place in the various narratives, adding touches of excitement, pathos, terror, tenderness, or humor, and in the end imbuing this particular reader with a closer sense of life in the Great War than any correspondent, novelist, or poet has yet given him—making it so natural, straightforward, first-hand, vibrant, that if you are like me you will close the book with the painful silence in the ears that follows great sound and the flush in the head that comes from the sight of broken bodies and the squeeze in the throat that comes in the presence of honest human emotion. It is not a criticism from without, but a cry from within—dignifying even 'Tipperary.' We have been inquiring for the poetry of the War. In my judgment, here it is."

THE MEN WHO BLAZE THE TRAIL

AND OTHER POEMS, By S. C. Dunham.

Come, take a trip into the wild, free Northland of Alaska. Breathe the cold, crisp air, laden with the piney odors of the forests. Be a miner yourself for the nonce and light your pipe in the circle of good fellowship about the camp fire. This you will do as you read "The Men Who Blaze the Trail."

Cloth. Size 5 x 7½ inches. Title gold stamped from intaglio plates. Net $1.00.

This edition contains his collected verse, including the immortal "Ballad of Reading Gaol" and the fantastic "Flowers of Gold."

BIRTHDAY HOROSCOPES

BY DR. J. F. PHELPS.

Amusing, entertaining, instructive, because it tells frankly what you are—your character, temperament and latent possibilities for good or evil, as disclosed through the science of Astrology, by the planetary influences on everybody's birthday.

Startlingly accurate! You read it for your own birthday and are astonished! You read it for your family or friends, and you wonder what there is in Astrology that gets so close to the truth. For an evening's entertainment it is a novelty that you are not slow to appreciate. If conversation lags, read aloud one or two of the horoscopes, and you'll be busy the rest of the evening.

Paper, attractive cover design in colors, 5 x 7¼ inches, 35 cents.
Cloth, cover design in three colors, 50 cents.

The famous Cartoonist of "The New York Tribune."

From title to "finis" the book abounds in wit and humor which will make you scream as loudly as the eagle on the cover.

Commentary on the Psalms. (Ps. i-l.) By Rev. E. S. Berry. 8vo, cloth, net, 2.00.

A synopsis of each psalm is given, showing at a glance its purpose and general meaning. This is followed by an explanation in which the meaning is usually brought out by means of a paraphrase. With few exceptions, only the literal sense of the psalm is given, because this is the foundation of all other interpretations, and without it they are likely to be forced and fanciful. A thorough insight into the literal meaning of these spiritual canticles is an essential prerequisite for the due understanding of their liturgical use, and of their prophetic foreshadowings, as well as of their inexhaustible wealth of mystical lore. Having the literal sense for a guide, each one can apply the words of the Psalmist to his own needs, for these inspired songs express sentiments universal in their application. Their mingled strains of thanksgiving, praise, trust, and contrition should find a response in the hearts of all.

Compendium Sacrae Liturgiae. By Rev. Innocentius Wapelhorst, O.F.M. Entirely reset and new edition. Crown 8vo, net, ¶ 2.50.

As a Latin text-book of Sacred Liturgy, Wapelhorst's Compendium has not been excelled. It has all the excellence of a model text-book and has, therefore, from the beginning been a great favorite with the clergy and, perhaps, even more so with the seminaries. Though not exhaustive of the subject, it is withal comprehensive and fairly complete. It embodies all the elements that a student of Sacred Liturgy should become acquainted with, all superfluous matters having been suppressed. The style is clear, simple, and concise. A mere glance at the division and arrangement of the book will show that the author's aim was perspicuity, which it must be admitted, is invaluable in a text-book as an aid to understanding and memory.

Since its first appearance, in 1887, Wapelhorst's Compendium has been in use as a text-book of Sacred Liturgy in many seminaries of the United States and Europe. As a reference book for questions that require an immediate solution it knows no equal. It is a work that has stood the test of time and, having been brought up to date by the present ninth edition, it surely deserves a place of distinction in the library of every priest.

The subjects in this work may be classified under three heads: Mixed Theology, Historic Theology, and Pure Theology. Mixed Theology answers to the wants of our times. Its character is philosophical, scientific, artistic, and literary. Historic Theology comprises theologico-historical generalities—Popes, Councils, Religious Orders, Celebrated Schools, Biographies, Bibliographies, Heresies, Ecclesiastical Dignities, Feasts, Ceremonies, etc. Pure Theology embraces theological and exegetical generalities: God and the Creation; Christ and all that has reference to Him, the Church and the Hierarchy; Grace and the Sacraments, etc.

Jesus Living in the Priest. Considerations on the Holiness and Greatness of the Priesthood. By the Rev. P. Millet, S.J. English translation by the Right Rev. Thomas S. Byrne, D.D., Bishop of Nashville. 8vo, net, 2.00.

The Right Rev. Translator says that no book he had read on the subject seemed quite satisfactory. He began to read this, and was fairly carried away by its order, its precision, its luminous teaching, its deep spirituality, and its common sense. When he had read it through he put it aside for some months, and then took it up again. It was even more instructive, edifying, and delightful, thus fulfilling in a measure the conditions of a classic.

That this work deals with important matters is evident from its very title, and still more from a glance at its table of contents, which marks craniotomy, abortion, insanity, hypnotism, and the borderland of science as its subjects of discussion. That the work is remarkably original is apparent from the fact that no book in the English language covers to any extent the same field of study. The book will be of interest not only to physicians, but to clergymen, lawyers, and educated men generally.

Moral theology is the special science of the learned author, as every Catholic student knows. The wide range of his learning has enabled him to treat new questions as they arise, and as we read this work the truth is forced upon us that all the troubling problems of the day, including the great war, are at bottom moral questions. The same exact and detailed information and pure English of his "Manual" and "Cases of Conscience" characterize this work.

Short History of Moral Theology. By Rev. Thomas J. Slater, S.J. 12mo, net, 0.50.

The distinguished author of the "Manual of Moral Theology" has broken new ground in writing a history of this subject. Father Gigot displays a very praiseworthy objectiveness. This is not a mere text-book of Casuistry, but a clear, precise, and scientific exposition of the questions which a priest is called upon to solve in the confessional, or in his daily relations with the souls entrusted to his care. The author states in brief and terse language not only what is lawful or unlawful, but also what is expedient and advisable.

Textual Concordance of the Holy Scriptures, A. Arranged especially for Use in Preaching. By Rev. Thomas David Williams. Large 8vo, net, ‖ 3.50.

He (the author) has done a fine piece of ecclesiastical work in compiling this great volume. Part I gives a large number of passages of Scripture illustrating the virtues and other moral subjects, arranged alphabetically. Part II does the same for all questions of dogma; and an appendix illustrates similarly the prophecies, miracles, and parables of Our Lord. This book will be of enormous utility to preachers.—Irish Monthly.

Theory and Practice of the Confessional.. A Guide in the Administration of the Sacrament of Penance. By Dr. E. Schieler, Professor of Moral Theology. Edited by Rev. H. J. Heuser, D.D., Professor of Theology, Overbrook Seminary. Introduction by the Most Rev. S. G. Messmer, D.D. Second edition. 4to, net, 3.50.

In this work, the missionary, the confessor, the director of consciences, finds not only all that he was taught in his moral theology, but he finds much, very much more; for the author has made the subject a specialty, which leads him to throw light upon every phase of the confessor's difficult task. And the whole matter is set forth in the language used daily in the confessional and with the penitents. The priest on the mission no longer regards the study of moral theology as a discipline by which to train his mind to the legal habits required in the sacred tribunal, but he views it as a practical exercise of his judicial functions in his daily pastoral life.

Homilies on the Common of Saints. By Right Rev. Jeremias Bonomelli, D.D., Bishop of Cremona. Translated by Right Rev. Thomas S. Byrne, D.D., Bishop of Nashville. 2 vols., 12mo, net, 2.50.

These two volumes are a fitting supplement to the Homilies on the Epistles and Gospels. They are a treasure-house of information for the studious priest; and even for a busy priest it is only necessary to read a portion of any one sermon to find ample matter for a short, vigorous and most interesting discourse.

Homilies on the Epistles and Gospels. By Right Rev. Jeremias Bonomelli, D.D., Bishop of Cremona. Translated by Right Rev. Thomas S. Byrne, D.D., Bishop of Nashville. 4 vols., 12mo, net, 5.00.

This series of Homilies is prepared according to the models of the Fathers of the Church of the fourth, fifth, and sixth centuries. The author gives for each Sunday a homily, both on the Epistle and Gospel, and explains the text verse by verse. The volumes are a treasure to all preachers and missionaries, containing as they do an exposition of all the Scripture read in the Liturgy of the Church, an exposition penetrating and thorough, but free from all technicalities.

Master's Word, The, in the Epistles and Gospels. Sermons for all the Sundays and the Principal Feasts of the Year. By Rev. Thomas Flynn, C.C. 2 vols, 8vo, net, 3.00.

There has been a demand for a sermon-book based on the Epistles and Gospels which would contain a unified and related series of discourses for the Sundays and the principal feasts of the year on the subjects proposed for consideration in the Epistles and Gospels themselves.

It was to supply this demand that "The Master's Word" was written. It is a sermon work that the busy priest may pick up with confidence and be certain that he will find a theme exactly suited to the day at hand.

In the two volumes there is a total of sixty discourses, all of the same length and modeled on the same plan, which is substantially as follows:

1. The special subject proposed for consideration as seen from the Epistle and Gospel (taken in connection with each other and in view of the particular Sunday or feast as such). This subject is seen to be stated in the Epistle in theory, as it were, by St. Paul or some other Apostle, and in the Gospel in practice, as it were, by some work, miracle, or saying of Christ Himself.

The connection between the two, as well as the sequence of the subject in relation to those preceding and following it, is made apparent.

2. A brief explanation of the subject.

3. The bearing of the Epistle on the subject.

4. The bearing of the Gospel on the subject.

5. The teaching of the Church on the subject.

The preacher has therefore all the year round a regular calendar of subjects for every Sunday and principal feast in order, with printed notes in the words of Holy Scripture itself as found in the Epistles and Gospels.

The author has constructed a sermon work remarkable both for the originality of its arrangement and the thoroughness with which each subject is treated.

Outlines of Sermons for Young Men and Young Women. By Rev. Joseph Schuen. Edited by Rev. Edmund J. Wirth, Ph.D. 8vo, net, 2.00.

Directors of sodalities will find here ample material covering every phase of every subject with which they may wish to deal. The sketches or outlines supply abundant material of strong, sound, wholesome Catholic doctrine. Even as they stand, there is not a single discourse that is not plain, practical, and preachable. These "Outlines" have the rare merit of lucid order, apt illustrations, and are enriched with a copious citation from the Holy Scriptures that gives them a special charm and value.

Some of the titles are: The Young Man's Amusements.—How a Young Man Should Walk.—The Cross-ways.—The Path of Iniquity.—The First Fall.—Ship reck in Life's Ocean.—The Seducer and His Reward.—The Virtue of Modesty.—A Shield in Time of Temptation.—The Service of the World.—The Dangers of Borrowing.—Keeping Wolves in Sheep's Clothing.—The Service of the World.—Sorrow That Comes Too Late.—The Lost Crown.—The Fate of One Condemned, etc.

Popular Sermons on the Catechism. From the German of Rev. A. Hubert Bamberg. Edited by Rev. Herbert Thurston, S.J. 3 vols., 8vo, cloth, net, 5.00.

Vol. I. FAITH.
Vol. II. THE COMMANDMENTS.
Vol. III. THE SACRAMENTS.

The Sermons of Father Bamberg possess something of the touch of genius. This does not mean that they are necessarily brilliant in style or that they present any remarkable novelty in substance or treatment. But they are quite admirable as examples in popular instruction, and the straightforward simplicity, which is their most conspicuous quality, is exalted by something in the personality of the author and lifted above the level of the trite or the commonplace.

There is a special utility of such a collection of sermons as the present. They convey instruction of a most necessary kind. Taken as a whole, they present a practically complete picture of Christian doctrine and practice, so far as it is important that the laity should possess what we may call a working knowledge of Catholic principles. No one who has acquainted himself with the contents of these volumes will be ignorant of what it behooves him most to know, either for the salvation of his own soul or to give a reasonable account of the faith which is in him when he is brought into contact with his non-Catholic neighbors. Such a man may not be learned, but he knows his religion and he need not be ashamed in matters of greater difficulty to refer questions to the clergy.

Pulpit Sketches. By Rev. A. A. Lambert. 12mo, cloth, net, 1.50.

This is a book of sketches or outlines of sermons. It will be found of great practical use to the busy priest. For each of the Sundays of the year is given a sermon outline which the preacher may fill up for himself, thus affording him a choice of subject and a suggested treatment which the many duties of an active ministry may often make most welcome.

Its doctrinal statements are clear and well ordered; the points of the discourse are clearly noted, and the sequence of ideas set forth in a manner to impress itself easily on the memory.

Sermons from the Latins. Adapted from the Latin of Cardinal Bellarmine, Father Segneri, and Other Sources. For every Sunday of the Ecclesiastical Year. With a Synopsis of each Sermon. 8vo, net. 2.25.

No one could have better utilized the most approved processes of homiletic teaching, without borrowing the circumstances of antiquated expression, than the translator has done in this case. The matter is old, that is to say, such as has withstood for centuries the test of aggressive opinions of teachers whose work is the destruction of truth. But the manner is new, as of one who, appreciating the insidious methods of modern error, has carefully sharpened the rusty but finely pliable damascene, and exercised his arm in the use of it with a living foe.—The Ecclesiastical Review.

V. HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY

Autobiography of St. Ignatius Loyola. Edited by Rev. J. F. X. O'Conor, S.J. 12mo, edition de luxe, finely illustrated, net, 1.25.

It is simple, direct, and full of surpassing interest, as the recital of a life of such stirring and altogether unusual events must needs be. There are many who have neither the time nor the disposition to wade through bulky volumes; by all such the present life will be welcomed.

Beginnings of Christianity, The. By Rev. T. J. Shahan, S.T.D., J.U.L. 12mo, net, 2.00.

The studies and discourses that are offered in this book deal with some general conditions of Christian life in the first three centuries of our era. In one way or another they illustrate certain phases and circumstances of those wonderful centuries before Constantine the Great, when the constitution and the institutions of the new religious society were developing on all sides within the vast Empire of Rome. A perennial charm must, therefore, attach to any narrative of the problems and vicissitudes of this era.

An inspiring record of the self-sacrificing zeal of one of God's most humble servants, the founder of an Order of black-robed, red-crossed men organized for the personal service of the sick, the poor sick, even the plague-stricken.

Growth and Development of the Catholic School System in the United States. By Rev. James A. Burns, C.S.C. 12mo, cloth, net, 1.75.

It is the author's hope that the present volume, like the preceding one, may interest non-Catholic as well as Catholic students of education. His conviction, in undertaking and carrying on these studies, has been, that so vast and important a thing as the Catholic parish school system must command the respect if not the admiration of non-Catholics when they come to know it as it is, and as it has been.

History of Economics; or, Economics as a Factor in the Making of History. By Rev. J. A. Dewe, A.M., late Professor of History in the College of St. Thomas, St. Paul, now Professor of History at the University of Ottawa. Small 8vo, net, 1.50.

The volume before us, of necessity in a brief way, covers the entire field of the production of wealth and its distribution from the Greek and Roman period up to the complex problems centering about capital and labor in modern times. . . . The chapters on the production and distribution of wealth in the modern period will be of chief interest to the average reader. Taxation, free trade, the rise of the great companies until the East Indian Company began to assume a political aspect in the second half of the eighteenth century, are all briefly but carefully treated. Then follows the question of the currency system, etc.—The Messenger.

Principles, Origin, and Establishment of the Catholic School System in the United States, The. By Rev. J. A. Burns, C.S.C., Ph.D. 12mo, net, 1.75.

The story is one which should appeal to the heart and mind of every priest in the land, every individual in the heroic band of those men and women who serve God wholly in serving the needs of the Catholic schools, and, indeed, every Catholic layman who must confront the problem of education for his children.—Ecclesiastical Review.

Rambles in Catholic Lands. By Rev. Michael Barrett, O.S.B. 8vo, with many full-page illustrations, in box, net, 2.00.

The romance of travel is here set forth in a most attractive form in this new volume of Father Barrett's. It is entirely unlike the usual book of travels, which in most cases might be more aptly called a guide-book. But here we find not only vivid descriptions of countries and their scenery, but pen-pictures of the people, their ideas, their manners, and their way of living, spread before us in good, plain language, which, in these days of slipshod English, it is a charm to meet.

Roman Curia as It Now Exists, The. By Rev. Michael Martin, S.J. 8vo, cloth, net, 1.50.

Here is a solid and weighty volume of information. Priests or laymen about to write to Rome for privileges or dispensations are generally at sea for accurate directions for so doing. They need a ready and reliable guide on the matter based on the latest information. This book practically gives the data and makes plain the intricacies of the busy departments that conduct the affairs of the Universal Church.

St. Anthony, the Saint of the Whole World. Compiled from the Best Sources by Rev. Thomas F. Ward. 12mo, 0.50.

Saint Francis of Assisi, Social Reformer. By Rev. Leo L. Dubois, S.M. 12mo, 0.50.

Francis, born in an age of faith, feeling, and enthusiasm, but also of social unrest, became the reformer of God's Church as the natural outcome of his love for God and for everything which God has created. A strenuous saint, but none the less open to all the tenderest human sentiments; a poet, a troubadour, a chevalier in character and in aspirations, intensely in love with a poor, abandoned, but chaste maiden, "La donna Poverta."

Saints and Places. By John Ayscough. 12mo, cloth, illustrated, net, 1.50.

This present volume must surely add a laurel to the fame of its author. An extensive traveler, his descriptions of the places he has visited and the saints that they recall are told with a delightful freshness entirely foreign to the usual pedantic volume of travel. His pictures are vivid and the manner of painting brilliant. Philosopher, poet, and cultured writer, he is a wit whose delicate humor enhances the charm of his book.

Thousands will read and enjoy this splendid review of "Saints and Places," and will rejoice that the author has so charmingly furnished them with this splendid work. The illustrations are more than ordinarily good.—The Tablet (Brooklyn).

Story of the Acts of the Apostles, The. A Narrative of the Development of the Early Church. By Rev. Denis Lynch, S.J. With 16 full-page illustrations. 8vo, about 275 pages, net, 1.75.

This book is unique. On the one hand it is an intimate and detailed study of the development of the Early Church; on the other it is in great measure an enchanting account of a personally conducted tour of the East under the leadership of the Apostle of the Gentiles. For those who desire a broader knowledge of apostolic times and customs this work will be of great assistance, while it will also greatly please those who wish an entertaining narrative of the early spread of the Church.

Bond and Free. By Jean Connor. A modern tale of the Pennsylvania coal mines, showing the tremendous influence of a pure, wholesome, convent-bred girl.

Circus-Rider's Daughter, The. By F. von Brackel. This charming novel has been regarded as a model love-story. It brings out most charmingly the motto that "God's flowers bloom in any soil."

Connor D'Arcy's Struggles. By W. M. Bertholds. A charming tale beginning in London and ending in the boundless West, portraying the effects of successive poverty and affluence on a lovable family.

Dion and the Sibyls. By Miles Keon. This famous novel of the time of Christ is in the front rank of the Messianic stories; and while all thoughtful persons will admit its equality with Ben Hur, a few will claim for it superiority. Besides the young Greek hero, Paulus, and his sister Agatha, the romances of whose lives run like thin, golden threads through the darker strands of earthly wars and court intrigues in the Roman Empire, we meet the great Emperor Augustus in his old age, and many of the scholars and philosophers to whom he delighted to listen.

Fabiola. By Cardinal Wiseman. This classic still maintains its rightful place as one of the greatest stories ever written about the early Christian Church.

Fabiola's Sisters. Adapted by A. C. Clarke. A story of Carthage in the third century. The central figures are the martyrs Perpetua and Felicitas. A leading personage in the tale is the famous Tertullian.

Forgive and Forget. By Ernst Lingen. A wholesome, engrossing love story. Three men love the same girl, and the resultant tangles and heartburnings may readily be fancied. It is a graphic description of what nobility of soul and unfaltering devotion can endure. The author portrays human nature to perfection and knows the impulses of the human heart.

Heiress of Cronenstein, The. By Countess Hahn-Hahn. An exquisite story of life and love, showing the penalties attached to any departure from the Catholic ideal. It is pregnant with the sorrows and joys, the mistakes, the success and failure, the strength and weakness and struggle which give to the most unpretentious human existence its sustained interest and compelling pathos.

Her Journey's End. By Frances Cooke. A very cleverly devised story of life in a New England mill town, with labor troubles and plenty of love and villainy.

Idols; or The Secret of the Rue Chaussee d'Antin. By Raoul de Navery. A thrilling story, exciting enough to please the most insatiate. The narrative turns on the inviolable secrecy of the confessional. The love interest is well developed.

In God's Good Time. By H. M. Ross. A strong narrative, depicting the intrigues of an unscrupulous rogue to get possession of his nephew's inheritance. The religious element predominates.

Light of His Countenance, The. By Jerome Harte. A fine tale of early Christian times. The love element is strong, and throughout the volume we are brought close to the life of ancient Rome.

Marcella Grace. By Rosa Mulholland. One of the very finest of Irish novels. It tells a love story of surpassing charm, with a skill and grasp of details not often found.

Miss Erin. By M. E. Francis. An Irish love story that brings in high life and low, piety and politics, and charms by its true Catholic spirit.

Monk's Pardon, The. By Raoul de Navery. An extremely interesting novel, bringing vividly to view the Spain of King Philip IV. The famous Spanish artist, Alonso Cano, is the central figure of the work.

My Lady Beatrice. By Frances Cooke. The story of a young American girl who in the effort to be "genuine" in the midst of a society where insincerity rules, is led to abandon the sphere of pleasure and fashion, and to become the wife of a farmer in whom she has discovered rare qualities of manhood.

Other Miss Lisle, The. By M. C. Martin. A story whose scene is laid largely in the still unfamiliar regions of South Africa. The heroine, Christine Lisle, makes the sacrifice of her happiness by accepting the addresses of a man whom she does not love, because her petted and spoiled sister Sylvia has set her wilful heart on the man who loves Christine. How Christine had the merit of her sacrifice without being called upon to fulfil it, is very well told.

Outlaw of Camargue, The. By A. de Lamothe. A capital novel of adventure, with plenty of "go" in it. The scene is laid in the south of France at the time of the Revolution.

Rose of the World. By M. C. Martin. A story of life in South Africa, portraying the love of a father and his daughter. There is a strong romantic interest, too.

Round Table of American Catholic Novelists. A delightful symposium of short stories by representative American Catholic novelists.

Round Table of Irish and English Catholic Novelists. A pleasing collection of novelettes by eminent Catholic authors of England and Ireland.

Round Table of German Catholic Novelists. Well selected translations of short stories by the best-known Catholic writers of Germany.

Round Table of French Catholic Novelists. A charming selection of brief tales by the foremost French Catholic writers.

Secret of the Green Vase, The. By Frances Cooke. A tale of mystery and love, based on a very clever and dramatic plot. The wicked uncle, defeated in his schemes to defraud the rightful heirs of their property, plays a prominent part, while around the little green vase itself centers all the mystery. The characters of two of the personages, Hildegarde and Irma, excite our admiration, the former on account of her strength, firmness and self-reliance, and the latter by the sweetness and unselfishness of her disposition.

Shadow of Eversleigh, The. By Jane Lansdowne. An absorbing tale of England at the time of Henry VIII, which has a distinct atmosphere of the supernatural about it. Both story and style of telling it are out of the ordinary run of modern novels; but both grasp the reader's attention from the first and hold it to the end. We are incidentally made acquainted with the sort of rascality which exploited the vagaries of the apostate king, and the atmosphere of the time as well as the people who breathed it are portrayed with a quaint, faithful pen worthy of such a polished and well-informed writer as Father Benson.

So As By Fire. By Jean Connor. The love story of a young, wayward, and desperate girl, who wrongfully assumes the place and fortune of a dead heiress.

Tempest of the Heart, The. By Mary Agatha Gray. A tale of a monk who leaves his monastery and afterwards returns. The author handles the subject with knowledge and reverence.

Test of Courage, The. By H. H. Ross. A charming story of American Catholic life, centering around two lovers who are parted for a time by unlooked-for circumstances.

Their Choice. By Henrietta Dana Skinner. Time was when Romance attached only to young things in the teens and early twenties, and a woman at thirty was thought to have quite outgrown the tender passion. Mrs. Skinner, by taking a spinster of 35 for her heroine and allowing an Austrian Illustrissimo and his son to fall in love with her, has demonstrated that worth-while men look for character in a woman, irrespective of beauty, and that mind and manner and companionship more than compensate for youth.

Turn of the Tide, The. By Mary Agatha Gray. A powerful and pathetic love story of an English fishing-village, with just enough smuggling to give it tang.

Unbidden Guest, The. By Frances Cooke. A well-told narrative of love, religion, and finance, with a heroine so truly Catholic as to be an inspiration.

Corinne's Vow. By Mary T. Waggaman. With 16 full-page illustrations. 8vo. A pretty romance of Americans in France. The story centers around a vow which Corinne made to her stepmother on her deathbed. An aristocratic brigand of the most approved Robin Hood type helps to give color to the narrative.

Daughter of Kings, A. By Katharine Tynan Hinkson. 8vo. A proud Irish girl—who traces her family back to kings—at the suggestion of her friend, the duchess, comes to take charge of the household of John Corbett, a wealthy English widower. There are a number of love stories involved in the tale.

Elder Miss Ainsborough, The. By Marion Ames Taggart. 12mo. A beautiful atmosphere of almost Hawthornean melancholy pervades the story of two sisters, one all that a Catholic should be; the other the last of a long line of Puritanic ancestors dying away and strangely distorted by contact with a frivolous age.

Fatal Beacon, The. By F. v. Brackel. 12mo. The Beacon was a well-known landmark, situated in an isolated part of a forest, and around which had grown many superstitions. It plays a very prominent part in the affairs of two brothers, one bearing an unsavory reputation, the other of an entirely different character. A band of counterfeiters figures in the story.

Hearts of Gold. By I. Edhor. 8vo. The scene of the story is laid in the forests of Silesia, and chiefly concerns the doings of a young woman named Ruth, who has a heart of gold, and a most objectionable person named Helldar, whose heart seems to be made of a much baser metal.

Her Blind Folly. By Martin Holt. 12mo. A powerful novel, dealing with the blind folly of a proud, happy girl who marries against her father's wishes, and even without knowing anything of her husband, except that he was handsome in face and charming in manner.

Her Father's Daughter. By Katharine Tynan Hinkson. With 12 fine illustrations. 8vo. A sweet love story with its scenes laid in Ireland. The author gives us some of that delightful character drawing for which she is famous. Especially pleasing are the Misses O'Kelly, two delicious bits of antique bric-a-brac.

In the Days of King Hal. By Marion Ames Taggart. Illustrated. 8vo. No figure in English history is more amenable to the purposes of a novel than King Henry V, and the author has woven a delightful historical romance around him. For those who like fighting, there is blood and glory galore; while for those who fancy the tender appeal, there is love and marriage.

Kind Hearts and Coronets. By J. Harrison. 12mo. A well-told story of American life of to-day, with a dash of European aristocracy. We are entertained by the absorbing account of how a young Southerner, residing in the north, came into his possessions in South Carolina, and how he won the gentle girl who loved him.

Little Cardinal, The. By Olive Katharine Parr. 12mo. A most absorbing novel about a "Lord Fauntleroy'" who lived among the London cockneys. The author has given us a picture of the best side of the London slums, and has paid a delicate tribute to the memory of Cardinal Vaughan.

Mr. Billy Buttons. By Walter Lecky. 12mo. The scenes of this racy tale are laid in the Adirondacks, and the characters are as truly of the soil as are Bret Harte's mountain people.

Not a Judgment. By Grace Keon. 12mo. New York City furnishes the locale of this narrative, in which Mollie Farrell, one of the "submerged tenth," has the reader's sympathy and love from the time she makes up her mind to be "not a judgment, but a blessing."

Out of Bondage. By Martin Holt. 12mo. A friendless girl of eighteen, suddenly relieved of the galling servitude which has spoiled her youth, determines to see the world for herself with the help of $5,000 which comes opportunely into her possession. Her steadfast adherence to her Catholic principles is a beautiful exemplification of the power of good example.

Passing Shadows. By Anthony Yorke. 12mo. This graceful love story pictures a side of life in New York which is seldom touched upon in Catholic fiction. The heroine is a stenographer in the office of a millionaire, while the hero is in the service of Uncle Sam—which branch of the service we shall allow the reader to find out for himself.

Père Monnier's Ward. By Walter Lecky. 12mo. An orphan girl, left desolate in the Adirondack village, where Père Monnier has his church, is taken as a ward by the lovable old priest. How her happiness was clouded for a time, until Père Monnier came to the rescue, makes vastly entertaining reading.

That Man's Daughter. By Henry M. Ross. 12mo. "That man's daughter" is a charming young girl, rich in many beautiful traits, and entirely unlike her father, a man who, appearing to the world as an honorable banker, is making his business the cloak for carrying out private schemes of revenge.

Training of Silas, The. By Rev. E. J. Devine. 12mo. A parish story of a priest and the pillars of his church, one of which is constructed finally out of Silas Maglundy, a conceited old millionaire. More discouraging material than Silas could not be imagined, but his conversion was a "never-say-fail" victory.

True Story of Master Gerard, The. By Anna T. Sadlier. 12mo. An altogether charming love tale when history was writing her first chapters more often with the sword than the pen. Back to the World. By M. Champol. Translated by L. M. Leggatt. The story of three contemplative nuns, forced by the French Government from their convent home and obliged to take up once more the secular life. The narrative is sympathetic and reverent, is well supplied with incidents, and is fairly safe to satisfy even those novel-readers whose only aim in perusing a new story is to gratify their curiosity. The chief character of the book is Henriette le Hallier, once Sister St. Gabriel, who returns to the home of her fashionable mother, and is tried in the furnace of the importunities of a worldly mother and a reawakened love. That a good many such readers will protest against the final decision of Henriette is probable; but the author's artistic instinct suggested the only proper denouement.

Black Brotherhood, The, and Some of Its Sisters. By Rev. R. P. Garrold, S.J. The three heroes are real and so are the numerous schoolboys who collide with the sworn Brotherhood, and not less so their sisters, guardians, and bachelor uncles. There is not a dull page in the book, to quote the mild and stereotyped formula of praise, rather, every page tingles. There is plenty of fun, and yet misfortune piles on misfortune; each well-meant plan for breaking the fatal net only entangles the culprits the more firmly, and at last the climax breaks on the reader like a thunderclap, clearing the air and purifying the scene amid grateful tears. There is also many a sound lesson, religious, pedagogical and parental, but each comes naturally where it belongs, and goes no further.

By the Blue River By I. C. Clarke. The Blue River is in Algeria, and flows into the Mediterranean. Hither came Frances de Vernay to her childhood home, seeking peace and healing. She had married into the family of the Amorys, with whom Catholicity was as the breath of their lives. Aubrey Amory, the husband of Frances, the black sheep of the family, sacrifices wife and child to his colossal selfishness, and her fidelity and love, with the marvelous development of her son's vocation, are well portrayed. The brooding mystery of the desert, the dark lonely forests, the superstition of the Arabs form a background in which their "Mektoub—It Is Written," is finely contrasted with the Christian "Fiat voluntas tua." In the solitude of their Algerian home they have many adventures. The story is enthralling, full of charm and pathos.

Faustula. By John Ayscough. There is something tremendously vital in this book. It is full of surprises, so delicate and so true, but all too brief for the reader. The author has woven a tale of delicate pathos from the facts of old Roman days. The contrast between the unselfish patience and self-sacrifice of the Christians as compared with the selfish discontent of the pagans is brought out in strong relief. The portion of the story in which the scene is laid in the atrium of the vestal virgins will appeal strongly to the reader.

Fine Clay. By Isabel C. Clarke. The main theme is a matter of heredity. A Catholic girl, who was deceived in her marriage by a divorced nobleman, bequeaths to her child the strong gift of faith in the Catholic Church. The poor desolate wife, who finds that her husband has already been married, is face to face with shame and disgrace. On the death of the first wife she is confronted with the alternative of remarriage for the sake of her child, but at the cost of the loss of the child's faith. The trial is a terrible one and she struggles successfully. Rather than the possibility of destroying her son's faith, she is satisfied to remain unwedded. The story is a splendid study of heroic faith and devotion. The fine Catholic sentiment of the whole tale is magnificently presented. It is a novel with a serious purpose and throws into contrast the spirit of the world and the spirit of faith. It is a novel that will do untold good to its readers and Catholics should see that it is widely read.

Heart of a Man, The. By Richard Aumerle Maher. This is really a great novel, dealing with the social and economic problems of the day; it is a story through which runs the blood and frenzy of primordial passions side by side with the calm and exalted elements with which Christian civilization has tempered the breast of man. The story is well named "The Heart of a Man." The author has depicted that strange organ of ceaseless human emotion with its perpetual ferment of joys and sorrows, of problems and questions transitory and eternal, answerable and unanswerable, of aspirations filled and unfulfilled—that mysterious compound of good and evil, hope and despair, love and hate, in a manner that entitles him to the first rank as a writer and a student of human nature. So well has he written, in fact, that this work has been called the greatest Catholic novel of the decade.

Ivy Hedge, The. By Maurice Francis Egan. The story is an endeavor to give one an idea of the present state of unrest, of the growing war between the unduly rich and the unduly poor, of the causes which have brought on this state of affairs, and, by implication, of the remedies. Socialism has much to do with the story. Dr. Egan, with a wisdom too seldom found in Catholic writers who take up this ques-characters remarks, "has borrowed all its best things from the Church." There are an abundance of incident, a variety of character, a mature philosophy, a large toleration, a trenchant wit, a genial humor which make the book at once an up-to-date novel of varieties in American life. "All sorts and conditions of men"—the Jew, the Socialist, the Syndicalist, the Captain of Industry, the actress, the working girl, the villain, the hero, the heroine, the convert, the priest—all rub elbows. The book is a fascinating one, no argument is ever pushed on to weariness, and the reader reaches the last page with regret.

"Like Unto a Merchant." By Mary Agatha Gray. A plot that has not been worn threadbare by usage. A tale of mystery and love, in which mystery touches the lives of most of the characters, love touches all, and the chief love touches the lives of an earnest, likable young man, and a sweet, lovable young lady. The plot is rapid and interesting from cover to cover, and the style is easy and simple. There are absorbing episodes, humorous touches, and pathetic passages interspersed throughout the book that should make it a delight even to the most prosaic reader. One cannot but like Helena—loving, sanguine, but nevertheless thoughtful and above all kind-hearted. All the characters are natural, and very well drawn.

Linked Lives. By Lady Gertrude Douglas. The author is remarkable for an almost masculine robustness of conception and vigor of execution, which co-exists with a delicacy of discriminaton, and refinement of idea and sentiment, in a perfection we do not believe to be attainable out of the Catholic Church. In nearly all of the characters there is a certain originality, which smacks of genius. The contrasts are in the highest degree artistic. None of the characters are exaggerated or artificial, but they are drawn with a boldness, freedom, and truth to nature which we do not usually look for from a female pen.

Marie of the House d'Anters. By Rev. Michael Earls, S.J. A story of an American family which arrived at "high estate" in European circles and is unique in the annals of Heraldry. Whether the Harringtons are entitled to walk with the nobility of the continent is not of so much concern to them as their desire to extend the hospitality of the Chateau d'Anters to all worthy children of Sem, Cham, and Japhet, and the consequent elaborate entertainments take on a spirit of joy that pervades the entire book.

Mighty Friend, The. By Pierre L'Ermite. Translated by John Hannon. With 20 illustrations. A modern romance of labor, warfare, country life, and love. Whether or not the reader sympathizes with the spirit of trade, as so aptly embodied in the three Harmmsters, or with the sturdy champion of agrarian rights, Jacques de la Ferlandiere, the effect of the book will be more than a mere passing impression of strife and disorder, or of love and hate. The various characters are deftly handled, that of Alberta, the stormy Jewess, being especially well drawn; and the author is at his best in his description of country life, the simple joys and sorrows of a people as yet untouched by the muddy contagion of the town.

Mirror of Shalott, A. By Robert Hugh Benson. It will seem to most people that in this tale Monsignor Benson produced the weirdest and most powerful story of its kind in existence. Monsignor Benson's book is wonderful if the tales are true, and more wonderful if he invented them.

Only Anne. By Isabel C. Clarke. Self-sacrifice, or at least self-abnegation, offers the author an opportunity for a display of narrative craft. Anne refuses the offered love of Anthony because she knows it to be only second best and preserves it until the widowhood of the rightful possessor, her closest friend.

Pat. By Katharine Tynan Hinkson. An absorbing story of love and tragedy—a woman's bitter penitence for sin, and of her life-long expiation. But above all, it is a tale of the glory and of the regenerating power of mother-love, purified and spiritualized by suffering and prayer.

Prisoners' Years. By I. Clarke. An interesting novel depicting modern life in England and the inner workings of society regarding matrimonial alliances. The hero, heir to the wealth and title of his bigoted grandfather, by deliberately embracing the Catholic faith sacrifices all—fame, wealth, friends and even the girl to whom he is engaged. The later scenes are laid in Italy and North Africa.

Rest House, The. By Isabel C. Clarke.

The heroine of this novel is Peggy Metcalf, the daughter of a wealthy family. It is very probable that the delicate golden thread of romance, which arises early in the book, and finally enwraps Peggy in its folds, will become evident to the reader before the heroine knows of its existence—which is another way of saying that the story is written with consummate art.

Secret Citadel, The. By Isabel C. Clarke. The action of this story takes places in Italy, Europe, and Africa, and ample opportunities are afforded for beautiful and natural descriptions. The author shows herself an artist when she uses these word-pictures as settings for her most gripping and forcible scenes. The plot itself is built around a mixed marriage.

Shield of Silence, The. By Mrs. M. E. Henry-Ruffin. A strong story with part of the action in the United States and part in the north of Spain. Mrs. Ruffin gives some vivid pictures of life among the Basques in the most picturesque part of Europe, and she has included in her novel a striking account of the political conditions in Spain. Some of the most stirring chapters deal with the Barcelona riot and the influences that lead up to this fearful outbreak. The chief interest of the story lies in the fact that the knowledge of a crime has been intrusted to a priest, who of course is bound to secrecy.

Son of Siro, The. A Story of Lazarus. By Rev. J. E. Copus, S.J. A story of the time of Christ. It is as interesting and thrilling as "Ben Hur" and at the same time more instructive. The descriptions are beautiful and vivid. The author's great dramatic power is manifested, especially when he portrays Christ before the governor.

Through the Desert. By Henryk Sienkiewicz. "Through the Desert" should rank with "Robinson Crusoe" and "Treasure Island." It fully equals, if it does not surpass, these classics in interest, and ethically it is their superior.

Wedding Bells of Glendalough, The. By Rev. Michael Earls, S.J. This story, even though it contains scenes of disaster—the wolf in sheep's clothing, the warped lives of social upstarts, a marriage that is meant for a divorce, and the other intrigues of Kenneth Shankee—is essentially a story of sweetness and light. Read this story and find out why though the convent gates stood open at the very outset, the wedding bells rang out over lawns and terraces at Glendalough.

Milly Aveling. By Sara Trainer Smith. The story of a helpless young girl's bearing her cross with patience and courage. By so doing she becomes a source of edification and an inspiration to better living to those around her. The story ought to find great favor with lads and lassies.

Mystery of Hornby Hall, The. By Anna T. Sadlier. About Hornby Hall there hangs a mystery which is unraveled ere the story is finished. In contrast to it is Mayfair, all brightness, where live the people who are destined to penetrate the secrets that have such a blighting effect on its owner.

Mystery of Cleverly, The. By George Barton. Tells of a career of a youth who is thrown upon his own resources by the sudden death of his father, under a cloud of suspicion as a thief. After many ups and downs and some remarkable adventures, he eventually triumphs over adverse fate.

Ned Rieder. By Rev. John A. Wehs. Around Ned Rieder Father Wehs has built a beautiful story of parochial school and family life. The boys are a splendid set, interested in their tasks and games and not above an occasional bit of mischief.

New Scholar at St. Anne's, The. By Marion J. Brunowe. A jolly story. There is a convent school atmosphere about the narrative that is appealing to any one who has spent even a short time in such a home of kindly interest in the pupils.

Petronilla, and Other Stories. By Eleanor C. Donnelly. There are eight stories, and nearly every one of them has a very interesting plot worked out with dramatic skill.

Playwater Plot, The. By Mary T. Waggaman. There is a plot on foot to abduct Lester Leonard, a sick boy, who is a millionaire twice over, for ransom. How the plotters are captured and the boy rescued makes a very interesting story, which is sure to please the young folks.

Poverina. By Evelyn M. Buckenham. This is an optimistic, entertaining story that will appeal to girls of all ages. In the beginning of the tale everything is at sixes and sevens, but after passing through a very dark night, a bright day dawns for Poverina and her friends.

Queen's Promise, The. By Mary T. Waggaman. The little heroine in this story, after being taken from her convent home by her uncle, an inveterate bigot against everything Catholic, succeeds in finding an approach to his iron-bound heart. She is finally reunited to her father, a supposed victim of a storm at sea, and her way is opened to life, love and happiness.

Shipmates. By Mary T. Waggaman. Pip, a boy of twelve, is lying at death's door, without hope of relief, in close, unwholesome city quarters. A shack on the coast is rented, and there the family take up their quarters. How the excursions in his little boat, which brings back the roses to Pip's cheeks, get them acquainted with Roving Rob, and the results, makes very fascinating reading.

Talisman, The. By Mary T. Waggaman. The young hero of this story is mixed up with the saving of the famous Connecticut charter; preserves the town of Hartford from an Indian massacre, and is taken prisoner.

Told in the Twilight. By Mother Mary Salome. Mother Salome has gone to the Lives of the Saints and the volumes of early Church history and has gathered a great variety of episodes and adventures. Temptingly they are laid out before us.

Transplanting of Tessie, The. By Mary T. Waggaman. The influence which a little girl, educated in religious principles, may exercise in a circle where such influences have not previously been at work, is the ground idea of the story. It is most interestingly worked out through a succession of dramatic incidents.

Treasure of Nugget Mountain, The. By Marion Ames Taggart. The ride for life from the lake of petroleum with horse and rider clogged by the fierce unreason of the boy Harry, is a piece of word-painting which has few counterparts in the language.

Winnetou, the Apache Knight. By Marion Ames Taggart. In the present volume Jack Hildreth goes West, meets Winnetou under tragic circumstances, is captured by him and sentenced to die. How he escapes and how they become fast friends is shown through chapters of breathless interest.

FATHER FINN'S STORIES, 12mo, cloth, each with frontispiece.

Best Foot Forward, The. In these five stories of college life, Father Finn makes us acquainted with some new personages, whom, incidentally, he introduces into several delightfully amusing scenes.

Claude Lightfoot. A tale of a college boy full of mischief and fun, but always honorable. This book not only amuses, but will be an inspiration for higher aims. Claude's sister Kate, who is ever ready to help him out of his childish scrapes, is always the good angel at his side.

Cupid of Campion. The story is healthy and thrilling, and breathes the air of romance. Its scenery—the upper Mississippi and the neighborhood about Prairie du Chien, where Father Finn spent three successive summers—has given the author's pen new inspiration. Adventure, wit, humor are in "Cupid of Campion," as in the author's other books, but raised to a new plane by romance. There is a hero, of course, and a most lovable heroine.

Ethelred Preston. A story of adventure, heroism, and ideals—a good combination. The young gentleman who fills the title role is a genuine "newcomer." His arrival at Henryton College brings about a series of amusing escapades. Yet there is a deep undercurrent of manly piety running through the whole.

Fairy of the Snows, The. A story of life among the poor. The heroine is Alice Morrow, a child with a heart as fair as the budding spring. She is an original little girl, and the episodes of her life amid the city's tenements are filled with an abounding humor, sympathy, and pathos.

Harry Dee. Another narrative of Catholic college life. Replete with stirring incidents, it is never dull, and holds a thrilling plot. From the horrors of a haunted house to the innocent pleasures of college life and from Latin grammar to baseball, even the soberest mind will follow the upright Harry and his sterling schoolfellows.

His First and Last Appearance. With original drawings by Charles Svendsen. The hero of the story is Philip, who has "the gift of song." His trials and triumphs are told in a way to inspire the the youthful mind with courage and ambition. The book is thoroughly American in spirit, proving the possibilities of opportunity in this country.

Mostly Boys. A collection of tales about real boys in every walk of life. They are redolent of the breezy spirit of healthy, jovial boyhood, and permeated with the author's best brand of humor.

Percy Wynn. An account of the development of a "mamma's darling" into a real boy. Some boys will laugh at Percy at first, but as they read on they will appreciate him and find that he combines all the qualities they admire, fidelity to faith and friend, true courage and manliness, a spirit to endure all and bear all for the sake of right and justice. A tale that every boy should read, and he will be very much the better for having read.

That Football Game. The narrative is written around a football game, in which Claude Lightfoot is the captain of "our" team. There is a pure, healthy, vigorous tone about the book that is decidedly refreshing when we compare it with the milk and water stuff so often met with in books for boys.

That Office Boy. Michael, the "office boy," is an old friend. We are not surprised to see how finely he has developed as the hero of a tale all about himself. The story hinges upon a popularity contest conducted by an enterprising newspaper. The rival contestants are a sodality and a club. Michael is the strategist who wins for the sodality. The way he does it is admirably told. There is humor and pathos and many a lesson.

Tom Playfair. A more realistic picture of the new arrival at college has rarely, if ever, been drawn. Subsequent incidents in the hero's college life are described with the same skill, while in tendency they are such as to leave in the plastic minds of youthful readers impressions of a most ennobling character. The author's style is charming and the skilfully woven characters are true to life. The book, too, sparkles with boyish fun.

FATHER SPALDING'S STORIES. 12mo, cloth. Some volumes with Frontispiece, some with several illustrations.

Camp by Copper River, The. Tells of a camping expedition in the Michigan forests, with plenty of adventure. A wireless apparatus adds to the interest by helping to catch a thief.

Cave By the Beech Fork, The. A spirited, adventuresome tale of a couple of plucky, sturdy boys who ought to find friends among boys outside of books. The period is 1815; the place, the region about Bardstown, Kentucky.

Marks of the Bear Claws, The. An entertaining story written around the person and exploits of Father Marquette, the discoverer of the Mississippi.

Old Mill on the Withrose, The. A story of a Kentucky Badger. The adventures of a Wisconsin boy who visits relatives in the State of Kentucky. There are moonshiners, a real detective, a haunted mill, and they all play an important part in the story. But the best part of the story is the charming delineation of boy character, for which the Reverend author is so famous.

Race for Copper Island, The. An account of the adventures of Paul Guibeau, who ventures into the country of the Indians in search of copper mines.

Sheriff of the Beech Fork, The. A story of early Kentucky Catholic life. Replete with adventures, mishaps, attempts at robbery, hunting, canoeing, and the like.

Sugar Camp and After, The. A breezy story of adventure with the scenes laid in the streets of Chicago and the mountains of Kentucky. The many and varied adventures of Raymond Bolt, the young hero, are very interesting. The shrewdness which he displayed in making purchases in the Ghetto of Chicago will draw a smile from every one, and his madcap action of flagging the train, and the mystery which surrounds his disappearance will hold the youthful mind in great suspense.

FATHER COPUS' STORIES. 12mo, cloth, each with a Frontispiece.

As Gold in the Furnace. A tale of the college boy in his last year at school—a fine picture of the development of a vocation.

Harry Russell. Tells us of the rise of Harry Russell from a newsboy to an honored place at Rockland College.

Making of Mortlake, The. The story of a senior at Rockland College, who rises on his dead self to better things. The story is rich in variety and sun-lit with quiet humor.

St. Cuthbert's. A fine story of the boys at St. Cuthbert's College. It describes various escapades and pranks as well as the successes of a number of college students who are good fellows, yet not above playing tricks upon one another. The book abounds in those adventures which are sure to please young readers.

Shadows Lifted. A sequel to St. Cuthbert's, yet having a distinctive atmosphere of its own.

Tom Losely: Boy. A fine story of a small boy at home whose pranks and mischief keep him continually in "hot water." The humor of the book is especially welcome.

FATHER BEARNE'S STORIES. 12mo, cloth.

Charlie Chittywick. Will go right to the hearts of American boys. Charlie is a hero. He is cast in hard times; he feeds on adversity and prospers. He has grit and determination, and through all his trials he is a sturdy little man. His life shows how great an apostleship every Catholic boy can work, if he is a character like Charlie Chittywick.

Guild Boys' Play at Ridingdale, The. A bright, cheery story of an amateur production of "Hamlet" at Ridingdale College, together with other interesting doings of the Ridingdale boys.

Melor of the Silver Hand. A charming collection of chronicles of the Ages of Faith. Tales such as wholesome mothers tell their boys and girls.

New Boys at Ridingdale. One of those masterpieces of literature for which the Ridingdale series is celebrated. It is a delightful commingling of the gay and the grave—the funny and the fanciful; and will prove wonderfully entertaining.

Our Lady's Lutenist. Besides a story to which clings the fascinating atmosphere of olden abbeys and monasteries, it contains several other short stories of the same stamp, written in the charming, simple style so characteristic of Father Bearne, each holding out its lesson of virtue and piety.

Ridingdale Flower Show. Tells us some more about those attractive boys who can do anything from playing Shakespeare to kicking football, from improvising a parody on Holmes' "Last Leaf" to working in the garden or plain fighting. Such boys as he depicts are the real thing—no sissy boys, but strong and manly characters, apt to inspire others of their age and lead them on to good deeds and praiseworthy acts.

Romance of the Silver Shoon. With the beautiful simplicity of style and the charming way of presentation so characteristic of Father Bearne, kings and queens, monks and students, boys and girls are shown as they were in the glorious days of Holy Faith.

Sheer Pluck. This delightful volume deals with various periods of what the author calls the "Bright Ages." They will be read with interest by all who love the history of the Church and the noble array of saintly and heroic personages whose deeds will live forevermore, and whose lives are a portion of that treasure of holiness which is the heritage of all the children of the Church.

Witch of Ridingdale, The. The hero is a manly and energetic little character, and will be appreciated as much for his buoyant lightheartedness as for the sterling principles that guide him.

STORIES BY OTHER POPULAR WRITERS. Each volume 12mo.

College Boy, A. By Anthony Yorke. This is the lively chronicle of a boy's first year at an American college.

Flower of the Flock, The, and the Badgers of Belmont. By Maurice F. Egan. Two stories of juvenile life showing the art of Dr. Egan at its best, and replete with his inimitable humor.

Loyal Blue and Royal Scarlet. By Marion Ames Taggart.

A stirring tale of the Revolutionary War, with two heroes, one wearing the blue, and the other the scarlet.

On the Old Camping Ground. By Mary E. Mannix.

Taking us among the Indians of Southern California, the author tells us several charming stories, each complete in itself, and all marked with that ready sympathy and understanding of character that are so characteristic of her.

Pickle and Pepper. By Ella Loraine Dorsey. The story of how two spoiled children were converted to better principles. A charming tale for girls.

Polly Day's Island. By Isabel J. Roberts. Has as many boys as girls among its characters, and when this jolly, venturesome crowd are given a ship-yard for a playground and adventures suggestive of Jules Verne's stories are of such common occurrence as to be almost daily incidents, the result is a book which young people will find eminently satisfactory.

Quest of Mary Selwyn, The. By "Clementia."

The atmosphere of the story, despite thrilling adventures by land and sea, is thoroughly feminine, and the author knows her girls with an intimacy denied the acutest writer of the male sex.

Sandy Joe. By Mary T. Waggaman.

This delightful story possesses a certain wistful beauty that can not fail to make it one of our most popular juveniles.

Strong-Arm of Avalon. By Mary T. Waggaman. A story of those times when the Catholic faith was forbidden in, and Catholic priests were banished from, the colonies.

Taming of Polly, The. By Ella Loraine Dorsey. The chief charm of this delightful story for girls is the delineation of the heroine—lovable, audacious Polly.

Uncle Frank's Mary. By "Clementia."

The little heroine, by her sweet unselfishness and rare courage, so captivates the hearts of old and young that they eagerly turn the pages while sorrowing for her sorrows, rejoicing in her joys, delighting in the wonderful surprises which appear at the most unexpected moments, regretting that a story so overflowing with interest and go should have an end.

Wayward Winifred. By Anna T. Sadlier. Its youthful readers will enjoy vivid descriptions, lively conversations, and plenty of striking incidents, all winding up happily.

JUVENILE ROUND TABLE. A collection of stories by the best writers.

First Series, Second Series, Third Series.

Each of the volumes in this series is complete in itself and contains a collection of original stories by the best Catholic writers. No two of the tales are alike; all tell of adventure of some kind or other in a different place and under dissimilar conditions.

ALDEN. Tennyson: How to Know Him. (How to Know the Authors Series.)

By Raymond M. Alden, Professor of English, Leland Stanford, Jr., University. With frontispiece portrait. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

The book begins with a discussion of Tennyson's life, character and training. Then follow sections on Lyrical Poetry, the Arthurian Epic, Interpretations of Character and interpretations of Contemporary Thought. A great many of the poems are quoted in full. Lastly comes a pregnant chapter on Tennyson, the Victorians and Ourselves.

BAKER. Yard and Garden.

By Tarkington Baker. New Edition with jacket drawing in full color by C. Coles Phillips. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

This "book of practical information for the amateur gardener in city, town or suburb" ignores neither the humble "farmer" of a square yard in the back lot nor the proud possessor of a country estate. Yards, lawns, vines, flowers, trees, soils, fertilizers, foliage, insects, etc., are considered, an indoor winter garden is described in detail, and 130 or more illustrations aid in an understanding of the good advice given.

BAUM. Mother Goose in Prose.

By L. Frank Baum. New Edition illustrated in tint by Maxfield Parrish. 8vo, cloth .....net, $1.50

Here are the complete life-stories of the great little people of the great Mother Goose. At last we learn why King Cole had such queer tastes for a monarch, how Humpty Dumpty happened to be on the wall and Jack Horner in the corner, why Bo-Peep's sheep got away from her, etc., etc.

BETTS. Class-Room Method and Management.

By George Herbert Betts. 400 pages. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.25

Takes up the various subjects of the elementary school curriculum, tells what to teach, how to teach it, and how to manage the class. There is nothing in this book that is trite or hackneyed. The method presented is the present-day viewpoint. We present this book to the teaching public confident that it is the most helpful book on the teaching process that exists.

DE CAMPI. My Kindergarten Days.

By Anita De Campi. New Popular Edition. 9½ x 11½ inches, cloth.....net, $1.00

Illustrative suggestions for cut-out work, folded-paper work, weaving, pasting, etc.—interesting diversions to keep the little one busy. A place is left for inserting samples of the child's own work and the volume has been interleaved at the back for scraps and clippings.

CORY. The Fanny Cory Mother Goose.

New Edition, with a new picture in line on every page, illustrating the text on that page, with new lining papers and a new cover inlay. Full page pictures in full color. 9 x 11¼ inches, cloth.....net, $1.50

Here's news for every nursery! Fanny Cory has illustrated MOTHER GOOSE! Isn't that an ideal combination? Just think of sixteen full-page drawings in color—all with the trick of making every one who sees them cry: "Oh! Look there! See? Did you notice that the first time?"

GALE. A Daughter of the Morning.

By Zona Gale. Illustrated by W. B. King. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

This is the tale of a self-made woman. In the little farmhouse where her mother was exhausted by unceasing work, and every phase of family life seemed hard and vulgar and brutal, Cosma felt trapped, different, made for something else. So she broke away to the city. How she went to work and learned sympathy with all workers, how she bettered herself in manners and mind and spirit, how she met the temptation of fashion and wealth when her beauty brought her recognition, how she won her way through the university and made good as a private secretary, how she went back home to find love and common interests, and promised to marry the man who had awakened her soul, now ready to be his helper in his work for humanity—all this constitutes a story of unflagging interest.

GATES. One Day in Betty's Life.

By Josephine Scribner Gates, author of the LIVE DOLL BOOKS. New Popular Edition. Illustrated by Bertha Stuart, 11½ x 9 inches, cloth.....net, $1.00

The author has taken the tiny incidents and adventures that crowd themselves into the happy day of a little girl and tells them as she sees them from the child's own viewpoint. The series of imitative melodies by Mrs. Salter are arranged to be played while the stories are read aloud.

HEIGHWAY. Outdoor Stories for Indoor Folk.

By Jane Van Alstine Heighway. Illustrated by Emma Troth. 12mo, cloth..net, $0.75

Stories, simply and charmingly told, designed to inspire in children a love of Nature and to stimulate the imagination. The Story of Ruth is retold from the Bible, and the stories of Pandora and Rhoecus from classic mythology.

HOUGH. The Singing Mouse Stories.

By Emerson Hough. New Popular Edition. Decorations by Mayo Bunker. 12mo, cloth.....net, $0.60

Subtle in suggestion, delicate in fancy, these little song-essays are more nearly poetry than prose. They have a distinct charm, the charm of a soft and melodious voice in gentle reverie.

HUESTON. Sunny Slopes.

By Ethel Hueston, author of PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE and PRUDENCE SAYS SO. Illustrated by Arthur William Brown, jacket drawing by Franklin Booth, 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

MRS. HUESTON'S popular stories of the famous Parsonage family had in them the tonic quality of sunlight—health, happiness, sweetness and light. The same fine grace here shines more brightly still in the face of deeper facts of Life and the great fact of Death. This Tale of Two Sisters is a double-barreled love story—a love story of married life and a romance of young love. The sunshine falls on both these lovely girls by virtue of their own brave and happy spirits. For one the slope leads gaily up to a summit of joy. For the other the way goes downward to the Valley, but her cheer and courage transform the very shadows.

ISHAM. This Way Out.

By Frederic S. Isham, author of the novel, NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH. Illustrated by Hanson Booth. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

To get a license and a passport and be able to slip away from Berlin at the outbreak of the war, an English girl of title marries a Greek porter (or so she thinks him). They are submarined in the Channel and cast away on the lady's own estate. And then the complications come pell-mell. It is all dialogue—a minimum of narrative and description. It has the life, the movement, the quick touch, the surprise of a well-acted and very funny play.

JEPSON. Ann.

By Edgar Jepson, author of POLLYOOLY, etc. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

The delightful girl who gives her name to the book is a reporter on a London paper with an assignment to get an interview with a novelist who shuns publicity. This enterprise soon gives place in Ann's mind to the determination to rescue the lion from the very awful English female who is about to nab him and capture him for herself. Her methods of pursuit are ingenious, unconventional and highly amusing. ANN is Edgar Jepson at his best and every one knows how good that is.

JERROLD. France: Her People and Her Spirit.

New Popular Edition. Problems of the Nations series. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

KELLEY. Turn About Eleanor.

By Ethel M. Kelley. Illustrated by F. Graham Cootes. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

This is not a scientific study of The Child. It is fiction marked by humor and pathos, sympathy and imagination, dealing with things of eternal interest, love for children and the love of man for woman. Most of all it is marked by tenderness—real, genuine, native tenderness, always pointed with humor. This tenderness is a great gift, for the possessor of it touches the heart of the reader and is immediately one with him. Surely no one can read TURN ABOUT ELEANOR without a softening of the heart and an enlightenment of the eyes.

KESTER. His Own Country.

By Paul Kester. 12mo, cloth, 692 pages.....net, $1.50

Honorable Herbert L. Satterlee, Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Roosevelt, after reading advance sheets of HIS OWN COUNTRY, writes: "Mr. Kester has written a great book. Its theme is one of real moment to the country. The plot is gripping and tremendously told. The characters are alive; the intimate character sketches—the close-ups, to use a film expression—are in the same class as the pictures Thackeray gave us in VANITY FAIR. No one, not even Dickens, has put in the details more carefully than he has. HIS OWN COUNTRY is, in my judgment, the Great American Novel."

MALLOCH. Tote-Road and Trail.

By Douglas Malloch. Illustrated in color by Oliver Kemp. 12mo, cloth....net, $1.25

Mr. Malloch is the laureate of the lumber camps. His verse belongs with Kipling and Service—with what might be called the strong-armed poets. He sings of the outdoor life of the husky man, not of the daffodil-gatherer. He usually tells a story—a story of hard work, of cold, of exposure, of bravery and sacrifice, of rough living and rough loving. He writes the sort of poetry that delights the average man.

MERWIN. Temperamental Henry.

By Samuel Merwin, author of THE HONEY BEE, etc. Illustrated by Stockton Mulford. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

The publisher's reader, trained to candor, says: "Talk about temperament! No petted prima donna was ever in it with Henry. Complexity is an inadequate word when you come to Henry's character. To make him consistent in his inconsistencies is an achievement that ought to bring his creator the Victoria Cross. And Clem is one of the best girls in all fiction. She is the real thing, if any book ever got the real thing down on paper. You know every man, woman and child in the story; know that they are real and that if they haven't lived outside the pages of the manuscript they certainly live in them. The humor chuckles in every page and bubbles and overflows to an astonishing extent. By all odds this is the best thing the author has yet done."

MICHELON. Take Me to France; A French Phrase-Book for the American Soldier.

By Claude Michelon, graduate of the University of France, Delegate to America of L'Alliance Francaise, the National Association for the Propagation of the French Language; Soldier of France, having served a year in the trenches on the Western front; now in this country on furlough. Illustrated, 4⅞ x 6¾ inches, cloth..net, $1.00

The object is to teach the American soldier in the quickest possible time how to say what he wants in French and make himself understood, and how to understand what others are saying to him. There is no attempt whatever to fill his head with confusing grammar. Everything is handled with the utmost brevity and clearness. The book is rich in military terms. Officers and men of every branch of the service, and chaplains, doctors, nurses, ambulance drivers, etc., have all been considered and their needs of expression provided for.

MUNDY. The Winds of the World.

By Talbot Mundy, author of KING, OF THE KHYBER RIFLES. Illustrated by Joseph Clement Coll. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

THE WINDS OF THE WORLD is an adventure of Yasmini, the woman of mystery who fascinated King, of the Khyber Rifles—more a spirit personified than a person, an incarnation, with her songs and dances and pet cobras, of the charm and mystery of the East. Not Yasmini, however, but a native officer dominates this swiftly-moving, richly colored romance of the outbreak of the war, of German plots and Indian loyalty, and all the thrilling excitement of Secret Service. A real creation is the Risaldar-Major Ranjoor Singh.

O'SHEA. Every-day Speller; A Four Book Series for the Grades.

By M. V. O'Shea, Professor of Education University of Wisconsin; Florence Holbrook, Principal of the Forestville School, Chicago, and William A. Cook, Professor in the University of Colorado. Illustrated by Emma Troth. 12mo, each.....net, $0.25

Book One: Grades 1 and 2.
Book Two: Grades 3 and 4.
Book Three: Grades 5 and 6.
Book Four: Grades 7 and 8.

POCOCK. The Boy's Own Book of Famous Adventurers.

By Roger Pocock. New Popular Edition. Illustrated. Full-color inlay, cloth .....net, $0.60

Splendid accounts of the stirring deeds of the Vikings, the Crusaders, the Corsairs, the Sea Hunters, the Bushrangers, the Outlaws, the Buccaneers, the Explorers, the Pirates and the Conquerors, whose careers are dear to the heart of every boy.

RICHARDSON. Why Not Marry.

Compiled by Anna Steese Richardson, author of ADVENTURES IN THRIFT, etc. Illustrated by Agnes Lee. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

The short talks which make up this book aim to encourage all those who are considering marriage, dreaming of it or hoping for it, by proving that success and happiness in marriage are within reach of all who truly desire to achieve them. The material first appeared as editorials in PICTORIAL REVIEW. They were written by no one person, but by the editor, the compiler of this volume, and, out of the fulness of loving and living, by both men and women readers of the magazine. Most of these contributors had learned the secret of successful marriage through actual experience, sad or happy, accordingly as they had been unyielding or adaptable.

ROCHE. The Sport of Kings.

By Arthur S. Roche, author of PLUNDER and LOOT. Illustrated by Arthur I. Keller; jacket drawing in full color by Francois Flameng. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.40

In this novel Mr. Roche handles with skill three factors of popular interest. In the first place, there is the "turf"—the love of the thoroughbreds, the pride of the jockeys, and the excitement of the race. Then, there is a love affair which has none of the earmarks of conventionality. And of course there is the detective-story element, of which Mr. Roche is a past master, with the lure of mystery and the keen edge of suspense.

SHARP. Education for Character.

By Frank Chapman Sharp, Ph. D., Professor of Philosophy, University of Wisconsin. With bibliography. 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.25

Professor Sharp here, in popular style and with concrete illustrations, shows the nature and conditions of effective moral training, develops a systematic course in the study of the conduct of life, and explains the place, functions and methods of moral education in the school and in the home.

TOMPKINS. At the Sign of the Oldest House.

By Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, author of THE SEED OF THE RIGHTEOUS, etc. Illustrated by Edward L. Chase. Tall 12mo, cloth.....net, $1.50

Where a crooked little by-way joins the main street in a city you guess to be St. Augustine, stands an antique shop. Not ten minutes down the crooked lane stands the oldest house in America, which is kept as a museum. This is the story of how Youth and Romance came to the oldest house and the antique shop in the person of Pansy. Pansy—oh, she knows her name is ridiculous!—came to "see life" and because she had an observing eye she found much of the real thing in the procession that passed through the museum all day long. Every figure that crossed her stage aroused her interest and arouses ours—so truly is it revealed, so full of human nature. And as for Pansy herself, to know her is to love her.

WOOD. Modern Business Corporations.

By William Allen Wood. New Edition. 8vo, cloth.....net, $4.00

A practical treatise on the organization, financing and conduct of business corporations, with a special treatment of taxation and large collection of forms. The financial section includes capitalization, promotion, sale of stocks and bonds, corporate credit and accounting. The LIGHT In The CLEARING

By IRVING BACHELLER

Author of EBEN HOLDEN, KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE, etc.

With simplicity and charm; with sympathy and understanding; with humor and wisdom, Irving Bacheller has told this story of the "North Country"—the country of his first great success, EBEN HOLDEN. In it he has, unconsciously perhaps, shown us what patriotism means; has displayed for our inspiration true Americanism, and has given us a dramatic picture of the rugged and simple and honest lives of our ancestors.

Around the fortunes of a fine lad, the story of love and loyalty revolves. On one side stands Uncle Peabody, gentle, wise, patient, humorous, a really great character; on the other, Silas Wright, the only man who ever declined the nomination for President. Between these remarkable personalities, the young hero walks his appointed way, a way not free from dangers, not devoid of strange adventures, yet always the way of truth and honesty. With the light of learning and the guidance of conscience, with friends to counsel, with love to grace the way the end is the end of all right living—peace and happiness.

As a piece of literature, as an honest picture of a day that is gone, of a life that has past, THE LIGHT IN THE CLEARING will live for the enjoyment and enlightenment of generations yet to come.

GUSTAVUS MYERS
THE HISTORY OF TAMMANY HALL — $2.50 net

The first account of Tammany, based on original sources, scholarly, authentic, exhaustive, and up to date. It is a book indispensable to the student of American politics, and invaluable to the practical politician, whether conservative or radical, standpatter or reformer. As a remarkable human document, dealing with vital facts in American life, it should prove of interest also to the general public.

Mr. Myers is a careful student and painstaking investigator. He has brought more new facts to light in American history than probably any other contemporary historian, and is recognized as a reliable authority not only in America but in Europe as well. His works are a monument of labor and original research. He never makes any demands on the reader's credulity, but supports all his data by reference to first-hand sources.

THEODORE DREISER
SISTER CARRIE — $1.50 net
Now in its Twenty-Fifth Thousand

The best novel of the most significant American fiction writer of to-day

"I consider Theodore Dreiser a leading representative American novelist whose work truly reflects current literary tendencies."

Arnold Bennett.

"Readers there are who, having perused the five hundred and odd pages which go to the making of "Sister Carrie" will find a permanent place upon their shelves for the book beside M. Zola's "Nana".

Theodore Watts Dunton in the London Athenaeum.

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH

UTOPIA OF USURERS — $1.25 net

In this book Chesterton presents his credo on matters sociological. One by one the institutions of modern society are subjected to the brilliant analysis of his paradoxical mind. Familiar things are shown in an unfamiliar light, old wrongs and abuses are given a new Chestertonian sting. Like every rebel, Chesterton proceeds first to an attack upon the existing order before attempting a new one. But he does it in a striking, original way. Other social protestants write of the utopias of the idealists; he writes of the utopia of hard headed business men, of capitalists. Yes, they too have a utopia, and in this book Chesterton tells what it is. How the millionaires are going to arrange their paradise, what they are going to do with art, science, religion and other human institutions--it is all here as Chesterton sees it. A fascinating subject treated in a way to startle the most callous out of their indifference.

KAUTSKY, KARL

THE ORIGIN OF CHRISTIANITY — $2.50 net

This book produced an immediate and profound impression when first published in the original on account of its striking thesis that Christianity in its beginnings was a strong, vigorous, aggressive labor movement corresponding to the Socialist movement of to-day. Kautsky pictures Christianity as the revolt of the masses against the oppression of the rich and the ruling classes, and Jesus not as the Meek Lamb, preaching renunciation to the sons of men, but as the fighting leader of the masses, the great labor agitator of this revolt. It is this novel point of view, the human interest of the story, and the easy style that have won for it a wide popularity among general readers; while its scholarship and the author's high position as a scientist have compelled the serious attention of even those students of early Christianity who disagree with Kautsky's conclusions.

Kautsky is recognized the world over as the greatest Socialist historian, political economist and sociologist since Marx. In elaborating his subject he uses the now famous method of historic interpretation known as the materialistic conception of history, or economic determinism. The result is most startling. One after another, under his treatment, the old traditions, even as modified by the higher critics, totter and fall. But Kautsky is not satisfied with merely pulling down; he also builds up. In place of the old structure of Christianty, which he razes to the ground, a new one arises, picturesque and impressive, though less mystical and more human.

By applying his method of interpretation to all the known facts of early Christianity, Kautsky reveals an interdependence of many events which in the old histories seem absolutely unrelated, isolated and accidental. He is thus enabled to draw a connected picture of the life and the social and political conditions of the times which makes his book read like a story.

The translation was made by Thomas Seltzer and Adele Szold Seltzer.

M. Y. SALTYKOV. (N. Shchedrin)
A FAMILY OF NOBLEMEN. $1.50 net
(THE GENTLEMEN GOLOVLIOV)

This is one of the greatest Russian novels, a product of the golden age of Russian fiction. Saltykov occupies as prominent a position in Russian literature as Dostoyevsky and Turgenev, whose contemporary he was, and this novel is his masterpiece. It is the story of the decay of a noble family, a remarkable study of the influence of heredity, environment, and education, relentless in its realism and its unswerving adherence to the hard facts of life. The characters are drawn with marvellous skill and vivacity, and have been described as almost Shakespearian types. It is in this novel that the famous Yudushka appears, the Russian Tartuffe.

A FAMILY OF NOBLEMEN has been translated into many languages, including French and German, and is regarded by critics, among them Arnold Bennett, as one of the greatest books of the world.

Saltykov is the supreme Russian satirist, the Russian Swift, as he has aptly been named. "Our immortal satirist, Saltykov," says the celebrated Russian critic, Skabichevsky, "stands at the very head of Russian democratic literature. He is the pride and glory of that brilliant literary epoch which was the epoch of Dostoyevsky and of Turgenev."

TILLIER, CLAUDE.
MY UNCLE BENJAMIN $1.40 net

Here is a book that belongs in a class with "Don Quixote", "Tom Jones." and the "Pickwick Papers", a book that should not be omitted from any well selected library of ten volumes. How it has escaped the notice of American and English readers is one of the curiosities of literature, a mystery more baffling than the temporary neglect of Butler's "Way of All Flesh."

In the centre of the story stands Uncle Benjamin, a genial, good-humored, rollicking bon-vivant, a character that once known will always be remembered alongside of Falstaff and Pickwick, with whom he has many traits in common. But Uncle Benjamin is much more than either Falstaff or Pickwick. He is a deep thinker, besides, a modern of moderns, with a keen sense of the absurdities of society, its prejudices and conventions which he refuses to follow in his own life, and which he mocks and ridicules with delicious, Rabelaisian humor.

"It is a novel that has no equivalent in the literature of this century."
Charles Monselet

"A novel unlike any other, a novel that must take rank among the wittiest and most humorous ever written; a novel of philosophy, of progress, of reality, of humanity; a novel of the heart and of the head; a novel that is less a work of art than a work of genius... the work of a child of the French Revolution, who lived and died early in the nineteenth century and will be famous early in the twentieth."
Benjamin R. Tucker

"Uncle Benjamin belongs to those favored spiritual children of which the most fortunate father produces but one; to those rare books which by the delicate-because unconscious-blending of the ideal and the real become the common property of all times and places and pass from generation to generation in eternal youth."
Ludwig Pfau.

CRONYN, GEORGE, Editor
THE PATH ON THE RAINBOW
(The book of Indian Poems.) Introduction by Mary Austin $1.50 net

In this volume, Mr. Cronyn has gathered a representative collection of unusual beauty and rare quality, making the most extensive selection accessible. The startling modern note in many of these lyrics will come as a surprise to all unfamiliar with the poetry of the Indians. Many of these songs might have been written by our younger poets of the Imagist School. The chants have all the vigor of Whitmanic verse.

SONG OF THE FULL CATCH.

Here's good wind, here's sweet wind,
Here's good wind and my woman calls me!
Straight she stands there by the pine-tree,
Faithful waits she by the cedar.
She will smile and reach her hands
When she sees my thousand salmon!
Here's good wind and my woman calls me.

Here's clear water, here's swift water,
Here's bright water and my woman waits me!
She will call me from the sea's mouth—
Sweet her pine-bed when the morning
Lights my canoe and the river ends!
Here's good wind here's swift water,
Strong as love when my woman calls me!

TLINGIT SONGS

The words of people
Snow me under:
The words of worthless people.

It is only crying about myself
That comes to me in song.

Even from the house of strong drink
People get away,
But not from you,
Raven-woman.

I always think within myself
That there is no place
Where people do not die.

KILMER, JOYCE, Editor
DREAMS & IMAGES
(An Anthology of Catholic Poets) limp croftleather $1.50 net

This volume represents a collection, made for the first time, of the best songs and lyrics from the many famous poets of recent years who belonged to the Roman Catholic faith.

This group of poems are concerned not only with the religious emotions of the Church. They are pervaded by a magnificent feeling of youth that is almost Pagan in its freedom of expression; an amazing splendor of lyrical imagery; a sublime enthusiasm for bodily and spiritual beauty; and a strange mystical awe for all things supernatural.

Among the poets represented in this collection will be found some of the greatest names in verse of the latter part of the Nineteenth Century The reader will appreciate the quality of the selection, when he recognizes such names as, Coventry Patmore, Lionel Johnson, Francis Thompson, Alice Meynell and Louise Imogen Guiney, among others.

Last But Not Least—Mary Sherman—"The Girl of Mystery," who fights a battle all her own to glorious victory and friendly compromise for everybody—"Fifty-Fifty."

Colonel Brady—Himself a Man of Action, has kept his big story going from beginning to end. No idle words—no warmed over platitudes. Newspaperman, playwright, manager—a Colonel by right and title. If you would ride with him you must go at a gallop.

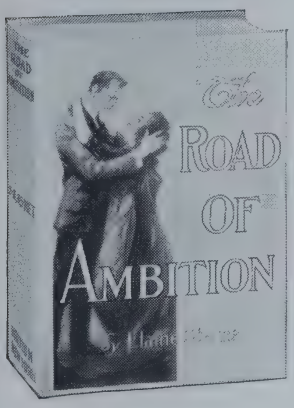
The Road of Ambition



A NOVEL
by
Elaine Sterne

The story of a man on the rungs of the ladder coming up from beneath

This is a Man's Book
—Likewise a Woman's Book

New to the fiction field this author brings into it a manner of speech and metaphor both daring and original—

Her mode of expression is for those of red blood—for those who would know things as they have been—as they are—as they must always be—in the shaping of a big man's destiny.

You of Back Bay, Nob Hill, Newport, Fifth Avenue, and Lake Shore Drive, will find within the pages of this great novel the living forces which array themselves against inertia. It is a story for the masses and the classes—the kind which keeps the world from "going back."

Aspiration is the keynote of this magnificent story, wherein the "Big Bill" of today steps dripping from the crucible of endeavor into the highway of attainment. It is along this road where the "Eye-tooth" cuts through and vision takes hold—the road of inspiration, contact, consummation. Only the Super-man may enter castles along this guarded road, marked—"Private—No Thoroughfare!"

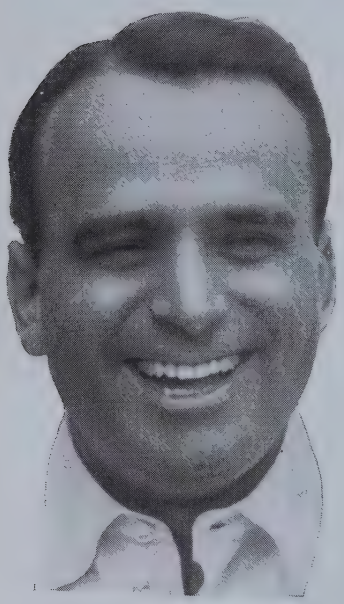
LAUGH and LIVE

By DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS



"Have a laugh with me"

The Man Who Set the World to Laughing—and Kept Himself Happy and Well.

"LAUGH AND LIVE" IS A MESSAGE

The Big Non-Fiction Book of 1917

Nothing in recent years means so much to people of all ages of either sex—a vital story by a genius of —a top liner in the world of achievement who laughed himself into a million a year.

Magnetic Personality

This Book Will Sell on Sight

No man in America has a larger audience—The postman brings him hundreds of letters every day—People want to know about the man whose smile is infectious, whose cheerful laugh chases away the blues. What he has to say is born of experience—it has the punch. His story is intimately told and is a wonderful portrayal of a great living truth as old as the hills and as good as gold. He gives you something tangible to go by and sets the pace himself—will you stick along?

The Habit of Happiness is Easy with Douglas Fairbanks at the wheel. He knows the road and can show the way.

UNCLE BILL'S LETTERS TO HIS NIECE

By RAY BROWN

Here's as gay a little gift as any girl could wish. Bright, sparkling and joyous.

These letters are from a matter-of-fact old uncle who talks to his young niece straight from the shoulder, exactly as he might to a boy.

Uncle Bill gives inside facts about moonlight, becomes violent over athletics, taboos snobbery, takes a fling at heredity, and touches up a few complexions.

The result is extravagantly and deliciously funny.

Other nieces will adore it, and by reason of its whimsical affection and bubbling good humor, will get a glimpse of life from a new angle—Just the Book for an Ingenue.

To the Uncles and Aunts and other grown-ups who can read between the lines there are a lot of laughs which may be missed by the less sophisticated nieces.

A Thousand Ways to Please a Husband

—WITH BETTINA'S BEST RECIPES

By
LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
and
HELEN COWLES LE CRON

With Decorations in Color
By ELIZABETH COLBORNE

The most unique kitchen and household compendium ever published —The Romance of Cookery and the Inspiration of Housekeeping—for two people in particular, and small families in general.

This volume is not the usual dull plodding kitchen cook book made up from "collected" recipes and enlivened by photographic reproductions of cakes, pies, roasted turkeys, and tables set with knives and forks placed "just so." Rather it is the "life and adventures" of "Bob" and "Bettina" who sail into the complexities of housekeeping the moment the wedding journey is at an end. Bettina's "know-how," plus "Bob's" good natured helpfulness, bring about immediate success to a lively and interesting attempt at home-building.

Bettina no more than entered her new cottage than she dons the white apron and brings every department into working order. The narrative begins with "Home at Last"—and each chapter has its little story along with Bettina's recipes (all the result of scientific training before marriage) and thus we come to find the way to success in every branch of household management through the vision of a practical and sensible young wife.

There is no department left for "guess work" from "ordinary days" to those of the "unexpected guest," the "dropping in" of friends, or the giving of a party, large or small. The book itself is a thing of beauty—handsomely embellished—practical in every way—a wonderful gift for any woman who cares about her home.

This being the case, the greater the vocabulary, the greater our efficiency —aside from names, places and things, most people know less than a thousand words—and they wonder why they do not succeed. Beyond our knowledge of words we merely wonder —our power to think stops. Men of great vision possess a large vocabulary.

The Jack Lorimer Series

By WINN STANDISH

FIVE VOLUMES

Handsomely Bound in Cloth. Full Library Size.

PRICE, 50 CENTS PER VOLUME. NET.....

CAPTAIN JACK LORIMER; or, The Young Athlete of Millvale High.

Jack Lorimer is a fine example of the all-around American high-school boy. His fondness for clean, honest sport of all kinds will strike a chord of sympathy among athletic youths.

JACK LORIMER'S CHAMPIONS; or, Sports on Land and Lake.

There is a lively story woven in with the athletic achievements, which are all right, since the book has been O.K'd by Chadwick, the Nestor of American sporting journalism.

JACK LORIMER'S HOLIDAYS; or, Millvale High in Camp.

It would be well not to put this book into a boy's hands until the chores are finished, otherwise they might be neglected.

JACK LORIMER'S SUBSTITUTE; or, The Acting Captain of the Team.

On the sporting side, the book takes up football, wrestling, and tobogganing. There is a good deal of fun in this book and plenty of action.

JACK LORIMER, FRESHMAN; or, From Millvale High to Exmouth.

Jack and some friends he makes crowd innumerable happenings into an exciting freshman year at one of the leading Eastern colleges. The book is typical of the American college boy's life, and there is a lively story, interwoven with feats on the gridiron, hockey, basketball and other clean, honest sports for which Jack Lorimer stands.

The Book Made for a Million Men

(1) For the man with little or no military training.
(2) For the man preparing for the Officers' Reserve Corps.
(3) For any alert American who would be physically fit.

THE PLATTSBURG MANUAL

By Captain O. O. Ellis, U. S. A., and Captain E. B. Garey, U. S. A.

Endorsed by

Major-General Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff, U. S. A.
Major-General Tasker H. Bliss, Assistant Chief of Staff, U. S. A.
Major-General Leonard Wood, U. S. A.
Major-General T. H. Barry, U. S. A.
And other high army authorities.

THE first section of the book is especially for the man with little or no previous military training. It tells him everything he needs to know from the time he decides to enter training, and it will be invaluable to him during his entire period of training and service. To teach a lot in a little time, and to make every point absolutely clear by means of photographs, drawings, and simply-worded directions, is the especial aim of the entire book.

The first section of the book should be of extraordinary value also to every American civilian who would be physically fit, whether he is going into the Army or not. The setting-up exercises, the general counsel on the subject of improved health and muscular development, etc., are founded on the practical experiences of the regulars in the U. S. Army.

The concluding section of the book is devoted to the especial needs of the man who is reviewing the work previously done as first training, and who is preparing himself for a commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps. A number of the subjects treated in the first section are here treated more in detail, and new subjects are taken up.

340 pages. 165 illustrations picture side by side the right way and the wrong way of doing essential things. Price $2.00.

The Century Co.'s New Books

CALVARY ALLEY. By Alice Hegan Rice, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," etc. 12mo, 400 pages. 4 illustrations by Walter Biggs. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

The rich and gorgeous Cathedral fronted on the equally rich and gorgeous Avenue, but it backed up against Calvary Alley, which was a sunless, sinful slum. But not entirely sunless and not entirely sinful was Calvary Alley, for Nance Molloy lived there.

External circumstances did not conspire to make life a glad and brilliant pageant for Nance, but there was a conspiring of forces within her nature which transformed, for her, even Calvary Alley into a thrilling world of romance, adventure, and danger.

This new book by the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" tells the story of Nance Molloy's growing up and falling in love; with a great deal about a good many other interesting people, for Nance was one who achieved contacts with the world about her. There was Uncle Jed, who was her self-appointed guardian; and Mr. and Mrs. Snawdor, her stepfather and stepmother, making Nance what she herself called "a two-step." There was Dan Lewis, who was a child with Nance, and whose mother was charitably termed "a mystery" in the Alley; and there was old Mr. Demorest, who played the violin and taught Nance to dance, and who had come from another world than Calvary Alley. He was a mystery too, but a very charming one.

And more such, easily recognizable as belonging to that whimsical, beloved family of fiction people which began with "Mrs. Wiggs."

MRS. FISKE: HER VIEWS ON ACTORS, ACTING, AND THE PROBLEMS OF PRODUCTION. Recorded by Alexander Woollcott, Dramatic Critic of "The New York Times." 12mo, 250 pages. 24 illustrations from photographs. Price $2.00

Mrs. Fiske, long recognized as the foremost artist and most interesting woman on the American stage, has ever been inaccessible to the public. Her extraordinary "theatre wisdom," manifest always in her brilliant work as producer, director, and actress, she has, because of her diffidence and her besetting sense of humor, been loath to expound in any interview or articles of her own writing. It would have gone unexpounded had it not been for these entertaining, unconventional, and entirely genuine table-talks recorded out of the long memory of Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of "The New York Times," himself one of the most entertaining of writers.

In the stimulating conversations of hers that he has recalled, she illumines the path of all those—playwrights, players, and playgoers alike—who are working for better things in the theatre; and for the young actor she provides a work that is at once a text-book and a kindling inspiration. Mrs. Fiske is the most commanding figure on our stage and here, for the first time, is set forth her theory of the theatre.

Beyond those articles which appeared in "The Century Magazine" are some hitherto unpublished chapters which give a history of Mrs. Fiske's work from the days when she was an infant prodigy, a four-year-old, billed as "Little Minnie Maddern," down to the notable productions at the Manhattan Theatre.

MRS. HOPE'S HUSBAND. By Gelett Burgess, author of "A Little Sister of Destiny," etc. 16mo, 175 pages. Illustrations by Henry Raleigh. Price $1.00.

She was not in love with her husband any longer. He semed to be prosaic; he did not play up to her imagination. Her fancy ran out seeking interesting men; and there were plenty of them who were attractive to her, and to whom she was attractive—painters, authors, sculptors, and the like. The husband was in business.

And yet the husband was a good sort. Every reader will like him, and sympathize with him. Suddenly the wife began receiving anonymous love letters. They revealed a personality that made all the painters, sculptors, authors pale into insignificance. He was witty, tender, wise, dominating, irresistible. He was so irresistible that finally she herself made a date to meet him. And then —well, it is a most satisfactory ending to a most delightfully told story.

Before this novel goes to press one of the best known dramatists in America will have begun making a play from the manuscript, for it is the liveliest comedy story an American author has produced in a long time.

THE AIR MAN. By Francis A. Collins, author of "The Camera Man," etc. 12mo, 250 pages. 50 illustrations from photographs. Jacket in color. Price $1.30.

In these stirring times when newspapers almost daily carry some thrilling account of a battle amid the clouds, a book like "The Air Man," by Francis A. Collins, cannot fail to interest a host of readers. Here, in succinct, vivid style that is not too technical for the lay mind yet never departs from a clear exposition of its subject, the author paints a picture of the immense strides—or shall one say flights—that aviation has made since the Wright brothers introduced it to the world.

There are chapters on training the tyro and the qualifications, physical as well as mental, necessary to become an expert; the art of navigation and the recently devised mechanical aids that make it almost as safe as automobiling; types of aëroplanes, their cost and up-keep, together with record of flights in this country and abroad; methods of use, such as for hunting, exploring, business, pleasure, or war, giving graphic illustrations in each case; the progress of aviation in the Great War, with its remarkable but inspiring code, the "Chivalry of the Air"; the gratifying record of American achievement in aërial scouting work during the Mexican campaign, etc.

All in all, this is a book that holds the attention, and makes the heart beat faster; it will have a tremendous appeal for aroused America—young and old.

AMERICAN ADVENTURES. By Julian Street, author of "Abroad at Home." Royal 8vo, 400 pages. 80 illustrations by Wallace Morgan. Jacket in color. Price $3.00.

Events and observations in a ramble through the South, the most picturesque section of the United States, by Julian Street, author, and Wallace Morgan, artist, who were responsible for "Abroad at Home."

About "Abroad at Home" Hildegarde Hawthorne said in a long review in "The New York Times": "There is an extraordinary amount of solid and valuable information in the book. . . . But never was information more delightfully conveyed. It is human, living information. . . . The book, take it all in all, is the most engaging, the most American, the most amusing and satisfactory and interesting record of a joyous pilgrimage imaginable."

Well, the same artist and author, following the same method, working in the section of this country richest in interesting material, have produced "American Adventures."

Mr. Street and Mr. Morgan visited numerous Southern cities and towns, and took plenty of time to do it. They tried to see everything worth while, and they had a lot of fun doing it. They discuss everything from Richmond belles to Mississippi floods, from plantation songs to the wasters at Palm Beach, from "you-all" to the negro; and the book's treatment of the negro problem, by the way, is perhaps the sanest, most penetrating, most broadminded, most illuminating thing of its kind done in years.

Mr. Street and Mr. Morgan saw the significant South, and saw it appreciatively; they did not see it humorously, but they did see all the humors of it.

A COUNTRY CHILD. By Grant Showerman, author of "A Country Chronicle," etc. Tall 12mo, 350 pages. 21 pen-and-ink drawings by George Wright. Frontispiece and jacket in color. Price $1.75.

When "A Country Chronicle" appeared last year it was acclaimed as unique of its kind. To read it was "like biting into a shining odorous apple," said The Chicago Tribune. "I was so interested in the reading," wrote one reviewer, "that I forgot to be a critic and look for places where Mr. Showerman falls downs or forgets the boy character he assumes in his narrative."

The same little boy, only younger, telling his story with the same inimitable boy style, figures in Mr. Showerman's new book, "A Country Child." And those who last year found delight in the simple annals of life on a farm will hail with joy the story of the Bug's earlier years, when the tiny boy tagged after his big brother and lost his hat at the circus and read to Mary Jane. He tells his story in the short, simple words and sentences of every small boy who is in a breathless hurry to tell everything he knows, relevant or otherwise. All the small things are big events to the little boy, and some of the big things happening in the adult world about him seem very insignificant to the young chronicler. Home, school, country sports and labors, scenes familiar to those who have lived in the country, make up the narrative of peaceful American rural life.

Underlying the direct narrative, which is told with the terse simplicity of a boy or a Greek poet, and unmarred with descriptive adjectives, Mr. Showerman has given here a masterly portrayal of the common-sense, though narrow, philosophy of a backwoods settlement.

LADIES MUST LIVE. By Alice Duer Miller, author of "Come out of the Kitchen," etc. 12mo, 250 pages. 8 illustrations by Paul Meylan. Jacket in color. Price $1.25.

This is a sort of pirate story of New York high society. But the pirates are extraordinarily smooth, sleek, well groomed buccaneers, and they talk and act most entertainingly. It is impossible not to admire them tremendously.

Nancy Almar was married to a rich man, but her chief pleasure in life was capturing other men, or rather, taking them away from other women. Christine Fenimer was not married, she needed money, and her chief pleasure in life was also capturing men. Both were acknowledged past mistresses of their art.

Riatt was a Middle Westerner with plenty of money, a good nose, and six feet of height. He attended a Long Island house party, where he was sighted by Nancy and Christine. They immediately gave chase, and this pirate contest at once took rank as a classic in society circles.

It is this contest which the author presents as thrillingly as a boat race, a football game, or a prize fight. The incredibly clever cutting, thrusting, and manœuvring of the beautiful pirates the author reports with graphic clearness and dramatic intensity. Of course she presents also the fascinating background of people and places of which Nancy, Christine, and Riatt are the foreground figures.

And the conclusion of the story is as surprising and satisfying as the treatment is brilliant.

HEROINES OF SERVICE. By Mary R. Parkman. 12mo, 300 pages. 16 full-page illustrations from photographs. Price $1.35.

Stimulating narratives of the lives of great modern women—Mary Lyons, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, Julia Ward Howe, Anna Shaw, Mary Austin, Mary Slessor, Madame Curie, Jane Addams, Alice C. Fletcher, Alice Freemen Palmer, etc.

Each of these crisp little biographies, which can be read or told in twenty minutes, presents, not simply a dry catalogue of dates and facts about its subject, but a vivid, memorable personality. And each subject chosen is significant in her relation to some important phase of modern effort and the life of today. Though intended primarily for young folk, they should be interesting and inspiring to older readers. In addition to their accuracy, these life-stories have the quality of literary excellence.

IN THE WORLD. By Maxim Gorky, author of "My Childhood," etc. 8vo, 500 pages. Price $2.00

The publication of "In the World" is one of the real literary events of 1917.

"All of Gorky's seventeen previous books are but so many stepping stones to this," said the famous Russian critic, Chukovsky, of Gorky's autobiography. Of the same work, Thomas Seltzer, the well-known American critic, said: "In it Gorky has risen to greater heights than in any other of his works."

Gorky's autobiography is published in America as fast as a volume is completed. The first volume, under the title "My Childhood," appeared last year. In that book, which won an extraordinary degree of praise in America, Gorky told the story of his life from his earliest memory until he was kicked out of his home and told to shift for himself.

Now comes another volume of the great Russian's greatest work. It begins thus: "And so I went out into the world," wherefore the title of the second volume. It shows him making his own way, as a worker on a boat on the Volga, as an assistant in an ikon shop, a doorboy in a shoe store; drifting about Russia; getting more and more in contact with the world; asking questions; and as he probes and explains his environment of people and things for himself, the reader senses the Russian national character with a surety that few other books on Russia give.

It is at once a fair description and the highest praise of the book simply to say that "In the World" reveals one of the most eminent of living literary artists in his boyhood, and incidentally the whole Russian race, with the same vividness, the same astonishing contrasts, the same marvelous effect of truth, the same gripping suspense that were noted in "My Childhood."

HEROES OF TODAY. By Mary R. Parkman. 12mo, 300 pages. 16 full-page illustrations from photographs. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

This book consists of a set of brief, crisp narratives, which may be read or told in about twenty minutes, presenting vividly the struggle for achievement and the triumph in service, along various lines, of heroes who have fought their fight in the patient modern way. Each narrative is not merely a chronicle of facts and events, but a vital, clearly visualized human story that is not only absolutely authentic and interesting in itself, but also significant in its relation to some important phase of modern effort and the life of to-day. Though intended primarily for young folk, these articles will be found equally interesting and inspiring to adult readers. For they are written with the true literary touch and a spirit of illuminating appreciation. Moreover, the book is sure to be eagerly welcomed by schools and libraries—in which there has been a great and increasing demand for brief biographies relating to leaders of thought and action in our own time.

Following are some of the characters vividly set forth in this book:—

John Burroughs, John Muir, Wilfred Grenfell, Robert F. Scott, Edward Trudeau, Bishop Rowe, Jacob A. Riis, Rupert Brooks, Herbert C. Hoover, Samuel Pierpont Langley, George Washington Goethals, etc.

TEXTBOOK OF MILITARY AERONAUTICS. By Henry Woodhouse, member National Aerial Coast Patrol, member Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America. Large quarto, 300 pages. 300 illustrations. Price $6.00.

An authoritative book, in readable, popular style, invaluable for the student of aeronautics, of intense interest to the general reader. It presents vividly the marvelous development of military aeronautics in contrast to naval aeronautics.

There are chapters of absorbing interest, profusely illustrated, on the new aerial strategy and tactics over land, the relation of air supremacy to land supremacy, the science of air scouting, the employment of aircraft to direct artillery fire, the problems of armoring aeroplanes and many similar subjects. The book gives detailed information on how to enlist in the United States Army Aerial Reserve Corps, how military airmen should be trained, and the value of aeronautics to the National Guard. It will be found invaluable as a work of reference for everyone's library as well as for the classroom. Mr. Woodhouse is the author of a companion volume entitled, "Naval Aeronautics."

THE JUNIOR PLATTSBURG MANUAL. By Captain O. O. Ellis and Captain E. B. Garey. 8vo, 300 pages. Over 250 illustrations. Price $1.50.

These are the authors of the now famous book on military training for men entitled "The Plattsburg Manual," which has been endorsed by Army Officers from Major-General Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff, U. S. A., down to dozens of Captains breaking in rookies for the U. S. Army. Both Captain Ellis and Captain Garey are graduates of West Point, have been instructors at Plattsburg, and have been in charge of cadet training at various colleges.

"The Junior Plattsburg Manual" has been written especially for boys. Its object is not primarily to make young soldiers; it is to help make, through the course of military training specifically outlined, straight bodies, straight minds, and straight morals; to help develop American boys into physically sound, aggressive, characterful men already in possession of the rudiments of the training necessary for the defense of their country.

For the boys of America these veteran Army Officers offer in this book the results of their study and experience. In addition to the drill movements explained in words and by pictures, there is information on military courtesy, how to act in the presence of ladies, how to salute the flag, how to shoot, how to do scouting and patrolling; on what exercises to take for round shoulders, a weak stomach, etc.; what to take on a hike and how to manage it generally; how to do camp cooking; on first aid to the injured, camp sanitation, signaling, etc., etc.

"The Junior Plattsburg Manual" should be of extraordinary value in boys' camps that emphasize military training, for high schools and other educational institutions giving military instruction to boys, and for any individual boy, or man either, who desires the elements of military training presented in the simplest manner possible.

THE OTHER BROWN. By Adele Luehrmann, author of "The Curious Case of Marie Dupont," etc. 12mo, 350 pages. 8 full-page illustrations by Lucius W. Hitchcock. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

Who murdered Willis Hewitt? Was it the attractive, gentlemanly young foreigner, Eric Brown, who had saved Hewitt's stepdaughter from death at the hands of Mexican bandits? Was he a Jekyll-Hyde whose baser half committed deeds of which the better self remained unconscious? How else could Dozy account for Brown's return to the very scene of the murder after having once effected his escape?

This complicated and exciting story of mystery, crime, baffling intrigues, hidden actions, and dual personality makes the second novel by this talented author a worthy successor of her first. Miss Luehrmann is achieving a reputation as a master craftsman of the mystery story, a type of fiction which is increasingly popular.

THE REBUILDING OF EUROPE: A SURVEY OF OLD EUROPE AND THE PROMISE OF THE NEW. By David Jayne Hill, LL.D., ex-Ambassador to Germany, author of "A History of Diplomacy in the International Development of Europe," etc. 12mo, 250 pages. Price $1.50.

In which this eminent jurist traces the development among European races of divergent philosophical ideals of government and their relation to the present world conflagration. At once a scholarly presentation of past faiths and a brilliant forecast of the internationalism which shall rise, in phoenix-like splendor, from their ashes.

Mr. Hill points out the gradual transference of sovereignty from state to people, and its effect upon the people's relation to the war. Not since the Crusaders battled for the Christian faith has there been waged a war so fundamentally abstract in its goal. Two conflicting philosophic principles—imperialism and democracy—are engaged in a life and death struggle. With brilliant reasoning and a wealth of philosophic authority Mr. Hill analyzes the strength and weakness of either cause.

David Jayne Hill, former university professor and one of the most experienced American diplomatists, writes out of the fulness of intimate study of the political ideals of Europe. He has served as minister to republican Switzerland, and democratic Netherlands, and as ambassador to the German Empire.

HEALTH FIRST: THE FINE ART OF LIVING. By Henry Dwight Chapin, Professor in the New York Postgraduate Medical School and Hospital, author of "Vital Questions," etc. 12mo, 250 pages. Price $1.50.

This book is a sort of "first aid to the well." The author, one of the most eminent of New York physicians, for years a professor in the famous Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, makes the point that to be ailing and unwell is positively immoral unless one has done all he can do to make himself healthy and wholesome. And one has not by any means done all he can do unless he has taken pains to learn something about his own marvelously developed physical machinery, and unless he follows intelligently the far from difficult rules for preventing sickness.

"Health First" is not a new fad book on health, recommending freak treatments and strange foods fit only for cave-men. It is sublimated common sense from a great physician with years of experience in the kind of medical practice that we call "regular"; and it is presented in a popular style, free from technicalities, extremely clear and interesting.

The following chapter headings indicate the scope of the book: Health First—The Need of the Day; Health for the Body—An Efficient Machine Wanted; Health for the Infant—A Right Start; Health for the Growing Child—Normal Development; Health and Education—Proper Training; Health for Middle Age—Conserving Life; Health for the Old—Prolonging Life; Health and Nutrition—The Food Question; Health and Disease—Avoiding Infection; Health in Diferent Seasons—Climatic influences; Health in City and Country—Local Influences; Health and Happiness—Moral Influences.

VAGABONDING DOWN THE ANDES. By Harry A. Franck, author of "Tramping Through Mexico, Guatemala, and Honduras," etc. Royal 8vo, 500 pages. 200 illustrations from photographs taken by the author. Jacket in color. Price $4.00.

Harry A. Franck spent three years exploring South America. And in this case "exploring" does not mean being accompanied by a well-equipped party and sailing up a jungle river in search of new zoological species or a River of Doubt. It means going alone, on foot, from village to village down the terrible length of the Andes. It means living with the natives, Indian and white, studying their history, their habits, their conditions of life. It means suffering horribly from cold and heat and hunger and fever and a hundred other hardships. It means studying the language and literature and politics and social conditions of every district. It means doing something infinitely more interesting than making mere geographical discoveries; it means mapping out the Andean mind. The book might be called a footnote to Pan-Americanism; for it is a significant study of the human nature of half a continent. But above all it is a book of adventure and color and incident—as entertaining as the Arabian Nights.

Mr. Franck brought back from his three years' Southern wanderings—or rather sent back from time to time—about a wagon load of notes and kodak films. This book, with its 200 illustrations from photographs, is the result of a careful selection from a large part of that vast material, and includes only the most significant and entertaining facts.

LIFE, ART, AND LETTERS OF GEORGE INNESS. By George Inness, Jr. With an introduction by Elliot Dangerfield. Royal 8vo, 350 pages. 32 full-page illustrations. Price $4.00.

"What I would like to give to you is George Inness as he was, as he talked, as he lived—not what I saw in him, not how I interpreted him, but him—and, having given you all I can remember of him, and what he said and did, I want you to form your own opinion." So the son of the greatest landscape painter America has known prefaces this biography. With simplicity and vividness he sets down his memories of his father, beginning with his earliest recollection, when "Pop" painted the washtub green.

The annals of the great are filled with the story of struggles against well-nigh insuperable handicaps of poverty. George Inness faced the far subtler and harder battle against bourgeois antagonism to "artists, play-actors and poets."

THE NOTE-BOOK OF AN INTELLIGENCE OFFICER. By Major Eric Fisher Wood, author of "The Note-Book of an Attache," etc. 12mo, 300 pages. Illustrated from photographs, and with drawings and maps. Price $1.60.

The reading public, which welcomed this author's remarkably vivid and illuminating account of his experiences as an attache of the American Embassy in Paris early in the War, should be interested even more in his new book, "The Note-Book of an Intelligence Officer." Mr. Wood has developed as a keen observer, as a writer, and as a soldier. He left off his studies at the Beaux Arts to serve the American Embassy. Since that time, except for a few months of peace in America, he has been in the thick of great movements.

Leaving the United States last Autumn, after he had waged a whirlwind campaign of preparedness, he offered his services to England to fight Germany. They were accepted. A favorite of Lloyd George, Lord Northcliffe and other powerful figures, he first saw service in the Navy. He then went to the Army in France, took part in a charge from the trenches, was wounded, and sent back to an English Hospital. With the rank of Major, he is now ready for service again.

Major Wood, with his American birth and breeding and his service in the English Army and Navy, is able to give America an impression of what constitutes war on the Western front that should be invaluable. In addition to the thrilling narrative of the fighting in which he took part, he gives authoritative information as to how the soldiers are transported, housed, trained, etc.—a branch of the service in which he was especially interested.

DORMIE ONE: AND OTHER GOLF STORIES. By Holworthy Hall, author of "Henry of Navarre," etc. 12mo, 350 pages. 8 full-page illustrations by Wallace Morgan, George Wright, etc. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

Golf is a difficult game in which to immortalize a hero. Possibly this is because his caddy, like his valet, sees a man in times of exceptional stress. It is not easy for a golfer who is, after all, but human to maintain unruffled composure when he dubs his shot, hooks out of bounds, overplays a pin, tops into the brook, and drives into a stone wall.

Holworthy Hall has played golf for more than twenty years and has accumulated a store of golfing anecdotes, including every hard luck story there is and alibis that would give Ananias material. In his new book he achieves an epic in prose for the golfing amateur. The hero is no individual man, he is the type—the golfer—and the story of his sufferings and triumphs are as thrilling as the contests celebrated in Book IV of the Aeneid.

SECRETS OF ARCTIC TRAVEL. By Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, author of "The North Pole," etc. 8vo, 350 pages. 32 illustrations from photographs taken by the author. Jacket in color. Price $2.50.

A romance of American achievement where all others had failed. An inspiriting fact-story of how courage, persistence, and inventive genius overcame previously unsurmounted difficulties. A sort of handbook on Arctic travel, indeed on difficult and dangerous traveling anywhere, and a narrative of thrilling adventure as well.

The man who finally achieved the discovery of the North Pole, it is now known, was materially assisted toward that success by certain methods of Arctic travel which his American ingenuity had devised. It is possible that it was just these secret methods which tipped the scales, after so many years of failure, in favor of the great explorer's ultimate success.

For example, Rear Admiral Peary found a way so to ice the runners of his sleds that the ice would stay on. That meant that the sleds could go faster and farther with a smaller loss of dogs than previously. Others had known the advantages of icing the runners, but they could not make the ice stay on. Peary tells how he did it in this book.

And the ice on the runners is only an example. Many new methods of cooking, of packing, of forced marching, of fighting successfully the battle against grim nature, were invented or developed.

TEXTBOOK OF NAVAL AERONAUTICS. By Henry Woodhouse, member Board of Governors Aero Club of America, member National Aerial Coast Patrol Commission, etc. With a Foreword by Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske. Large Quarto, 300 pages, index. 300 illustrations. Price $6.00.

For all who wish to fly in the service of the Navy, or for pleasure, this work is indispensable. The general reader will find this record of the conquest of the air in the Great War as entertaining as the most thrilling fiction.

The official records of the amazing activities of the embattled air fleets are described and illustrated in detail. A comprehensive library on aeronautics is comprised in this single volume. Special chapters have been contributed by the leading authorities on aeronautics in America, including Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, Elmer A. Sperry, Lawrence B. Sperry, and others.

The invaluable assistance of aircraft both in offensive and defensive operations, their revolutionary effect on the science of naval strategy, their value in supplementing the work of the fleets and in guarding our coastline from attack, are described in the light of their actual achievements in the Great War. The organization of the several aeronautic services in connection with the United States Navy is given in detail. The book presents in convenient form the latest official information concerning the aerial defenses of the fifteen Naval Districts, the administration of our naval aeronautic stations, the course of instruction required for the air service of the United States Navy, and a wealth of similar material.

In an appreciative foreword, Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske describes the book as "clear, correct, and stimulating."

THE STORY-BOOK OF SCIENCE. By Jules Henri Fabre. Translated from the Nineteenth French Edition by Florence Constance Bicknell. 8vo, 400 pages. Jacket in color. Illustrated. Price $2.00.

A book of popular science, about the metals under the earth, the plants and animals on the surface, and the planets in the heavens above, told in story-form by the most gifted nature writer the world has known in a hundred years. It is a book especially for young people of from ten to sixteen years; it is also a fascinating and accurate account in crystal-clear language for grown-ups with hearts still young enough to permit them to be interested in the great living but inarticulate world around them.

Maeterlinck has called Fabre "the insects' Homer." In France his popularising handbooks have gone into many editions. Of recent years, too, the entire world that read has bestirred itself to do honor to the eminent scientist who studied the nature world with the zeal of a medieval monk, whose background of scholarship and innate chivalry and good humor always makes itself felt in his writing, and who expresses himself with the simplicity and fire of a poet.

The Century Co. counts itself fortunate in being able to offer this French classic in so admirable a translation.

RODIN: THE MAN AND HIS ART: WITH LEAVES FROM HIS NOTE-BOOKS. Compiled, with an introduction, by Judith Cladel. Quarto, about 357 pages, including 50 illustrations showing Rodin, his workshop, many of his greatest works, etc. Price $5.00.

A book not only for the art student but also for every person who is interested in any phase of that thrilling interpretation and seasoner of life which is called art.

An art book of unique interest and importance, revealing, largely in his own words, the greatest sculptor of modern times. Rodin's meditations on his art, on modeling, on flowers, on portraiture, on nature, and on the great works of the past, are expressed in the most lucid language and with the simplicity and veracity of profound experience and observation. We hear him chat, now in his atelier about some piece of antique sculpture that has just come into his possession, or about a work he has in hand, now while he rambles in his garden or through the museums or the old streets of Paris.

THE MAN OF THE FUTURE. By George W. Perkins. 8vo, 250 pages. Price $2.00.

George W. Perkins, financier and philosopher, believes that the man of the future must become a follower of a new philosophy of life if he hopes to find a solution for the great economic and industrial questions of the day. This new philosophy governing the thoughts of the modern world, is a philosophy of coordination and cooperation—rather than the regime of cut-throat competition with "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." Individualism, says Mr. Perkins, is as dead as a smelt. This is the age of centralization—the age of cooperative effort, not ruthless competition.

Mr. Perkins believes that the advances in science, intercommunication and universal education have been the three great factors in bringing about the new order of things. Bands of steel and streams of electricity have drawn the civilized world together.

In the new era, Mr. Perkins declares, economic competition will lose its pride of place. Governments must regulate corporations instead of attempting to suppress them by legislation like the Sherman Law, for giant corporations are a product of the modern electrical age. The only way to get rid of them would be to prohibit the use of electricity and steam.

Mr. Perkins is not conservative in his arguments, but his reasoning is constructive. He points out the reforms which he believes would improve America's industrial situation. He is optimistic. His book is addressed specifically to young men on the threshold of business careers, but will prove of great interest to any man who has the welfare of his country at heart.

MORE POWER TO YOU. By Bruce Barton. 16 mo, 175pages. Price $1.00.

Wise advice to the young men and women of America, expressed in the terse, vivid style of this well-known magazine editor.

Mr. Barton believes that the greatest force for righteousness in the United States today is nothing more or less than the once maligned Business. And he brings weighty arguments to prove his statement. He points out, however, that "making good" in business may be attained at too high a price, at the sacrifice of home life, friends and books. In witty, epigrammatic phrases the editor of "Every Week" nails down home truths. Among the chapters are: "Do you Bore Yourself?", "About Making Money", "Perhaps You Don't Dream Enough", "Some Poor Blind Folk Have Never Seen A Miracle", etc., etc. This is essentially an American book, filled with high American idealism to correct certain dangerous American tendencies, and told with a directness and simplicity characteristic of our people.

THE SECOND FIDDLE. By Phyllis Bottome, author of "The Dark Tower," etc. 12mo, 350 pages. 8 full-page illustrations by Norman Price. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

Miss Bottome is that most precious possession of a reading public—a natural story-teller. There are hordes of people who successfully perform the labor of turning out stories for the printer, stories long and short, light or heavy, with a noble purpose or with none. But there are few natural story-tellers, the sort of fictionist who writes with apparently perfect ease, with absolutely perfect clearness, with a delighted and sure command of all the arts of literary entertainment, and with the irresistible gusto that one has in doing a beloved work with the consciousness of doing it extraordinarily well. Perhaps it is primarily this spontaneous gusto that makes people like to read such an author; they are rushed, by a sheer force of personality, into a sort of co-operation with the author, feeling themselves the thrill of assisting at a creation.

Well, that is the kind of an author Phyllis Bottome is. Her new novel, "The Second Fiddle," is perhaps the best long story she has done so far. It ends happily, it is brilliant with flashing dialogue, there is on every page, as "The New York Times" said of her work recently, a glow of humor. It is tender, kind, and wise. It is, in brief, a thing of joy in the fiction world, and The Century Co. recommends it with confidence.

THE BOYS' CAMP MANUAL: A HANDBOOK OF MILITARY AND ALL-ROUND TRAINING. By Charles K. Taylor, M.A., Director of Camp Penn, Under-Military Age Camp near Plattsburg. 12mo, 225 pages. 50 illustrations. Price $1.25.

This book is by a recognized authority on that kind of training of boys which encourages and enables them to help themselves.

Mr. Taylor, who was the founder of the widely-known Camp Penn, near Plattsburg, and who has been in charge of it for a number of years, has perhaps furthered the methods of self-development in boys' camps more than any one else. A student of the philosophy of education for years at Pennsylvania, Princeton, Yale, and Columbia Universities, himself the originator of several methods of large value in the instruction of youth, an incorrigible enthusiast on his subject, Mr. Taylor has produced a book rich in information and interest. It is a concentration of his studies and experiences for years.

"The Boys' Camp Manual" is, as its subtitle states, a handbook covering the all-round training of boys. It outlines a course that gets them ready for all emergencies, and by means which are at once interesting, healthful, and unusually stimulating. It should be indispensable to boys attending any camp, to conductors of camps, and to boys who love the great out-of-doors and who wish to develop themselves whether attending a camp or not.

The story of a man who worked his way to the woman who needed him and whom he needed. It is a poignant love story enacted against a background of the ever-present war between Labor and Capital; and the author, who has a real understanding of that war, lays bare some of the most perplexing problems causing it, humanizing the whole question by the healing touch of art.

But the contest between the workmen in the great rubber factory and the mechanically-minded and unscrupulous manager is only the background of the book. The main theme concerns Kenneth Landon, whose financial assets are suddenly wiped out; Sylvia Percival, his fiancée, who owns the rubber factory; Sohmer, the workmen's leader and philosopher; and Greta, his flaming daughter. His fortune gone, his fiancée in Europe, young Landon goes to work as a laborer in her factory. He hopes to learn the business from the ground up, not so that he may increase the profits but so that he may improve the relations between the owner and the workmen.

In the midst of a great strike Landon works out his own salvation and finds the woman he loves and needs.

THE FRIENDS: AND TWO OTHER STORIES. By Stacy Aumonier, author of Olga Bardel, etc. 16mo, 200 pages. Frontispiece by Henry Raleigh. Price $1.00.

The title story, "The Friends," was originally published in "The Century Magazine," and, with two other stories by the same author, is now published in book form in answer to many requests from all parts of the country. Few stories of recent years have called forth such a hearty spontaneous flood of complimentary commendation.

"Collier's Weekly," in a long editorial article on the story, had this to say of it: "Very sincere, very vital—all the more so in that, without preaching, it shows life as it often is." F. P. A. in "The New York Tribune" thought "The Friends" was the best story of the year. "The London Spectator," in a review covering a page and a half, analyzed in detail the uncanny power of the story.

Mr. Aumonier's art is something distinct and fine. His stories flow along with an irresistible momentum and yet without strain on the reader, and the themes are such as fascinate people with mentalities and emotions that are adult.

The other two stories in this volume, also brilliant examples of his art, are: "In the Way of Business" and "The Packet." The Century Co. recommends this volume of gripping fiction with the utmost confidence.

ROVING AND FIGHTING: ADVENTURES UNDER FOUR FLAGS.

By Major Edward S. (Tex) O'Reilly. 8vo, 350 pages. 16 illustrations from photographs. Jacket in color. Price $2.00.

A fact-story of a modern soldier of fortune as thrilling and colorful as anything in romance, and told with the vividness, good humor, and engaging simplicity that is part of the author's character.

"Tex" O'Reilly, as his comrades call him, spent his early days on a Texas ranch. At seventeen he enlisted for the Spanish War, and went through with ardor unabated. Refusing a discharge, he shipped to the Philippines. Landing, he went into a battle the first night, which pleased him powerfully after the long voyage.

Transferred to many parts of the Philippines, he fought as long as the atmosphere was not too disgustingly peaceful. Offered his discharge, he accepted it this time, and went to Japan, where he opened the O'Reilly School of English in Kobe. That was entirely too tame, and after two months he gave it to his Japanese interpreter and was on his way to China.

Next "Tex" O'Reilly served as a bodyguard for a Chinese rent collector, took part in the great wheelbarrow strike, was bouncer in a Chinese theatre, instructor in the Chinese army, and once more was on his way, this time back to America. Ultimately he arrived in Chicago, "hoboing" most of the way. He had left home with fifteen cents; after a trip around the world and some few little doings here and there he got back with twenty-five cents. "Tex" was always a fox for profit.

Then came some filibustering in Venezuela, a great deal of fighting in Mexico with this, that, and the other insurrectionist, etc., etc.—there isn't room here to follow "Tex" O'Reilly in print. The Lord only knows where he is now. He is either fighting or looking for a fight.

THE ADIRONDACKS.

By T. Morris Longstreth. 8vo, 350 pages. 32 full-page illustrations in duotone ink, and maps. Jacket in color. Price $2.50.

This is a guide to New York State's great natural park, the story of two jolly companions on a fascinating journey, and an informal history, told in the most engaging style, of the romantic region from the days when the Indians had possession of it down to today, when the State Commission is doing its splendid work for its preservation.

The ground covered by the author, who gives his facts while he tells the story of his own and a friend's wanderings through the Adirondacks, embraces a section of woodland wilderness larger than Connecticut, girdled and laced with over a thousand lakes, shouldered into the skies by hundreds of mountains.

There is, for instance, an account of the early settlement there of Napoleon's brother, of the different tribes of Indians and their warfare, of Trudeau, Stevenson, Dewey, Warner, and others whose names are associated with the region, and of the present-day work of the State's Conservation Commission. There is information as to how to travel, what to expect in various localities, as to roads, hotels, etc., etc.

CHRISTMAS NIGHT IN THE QUARTERS: AND OTHER POEMS.

By Irwin Russell. Tall 8vo, 200 pages, gilt top, each page with a decorative border in gray tint. 29 pen-and-ink drawings by E. W. Kemble. Jacket in color. Price $2.50.

A gift book for all those interested in the best of American poetry.

"Christmas Night in the Quarters" is an illustrated collection of those negro dialect poems which made Irwin Russell foremost to awaken the interest of the American reading public in the vast store of unwritten folklore to be found among the black people of the South. Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Page, and A. C. Gordon have acknowledged the debt they owe to this pioneer of negro literature. "Had he been spared to letters," wrote Joel Chandler Harris, "all the rest of us would have taken back seats so far as the representation of life in the South is concerned." This new collection of Russell's poems is prefaced by a sympathetic sketch of his unhappy young life.

Another mystery story for girls by this popular author.

Janet and Marcia wondered and puzzled about the "House Next Door" until their brains were fairly dizzy. Why were the blinds shut or bowed all the time, with an air of desertion brooding over the grounds? Why did the little old lady with the beautiful voice keep her face heavily veiled both indoors and out? Who was the strange woman upstairs? And Cecily, pretty golden-haired, lonely little Cecily, who had to exercise at night in the raggedy, weedy garden, why had she come from her English home to this gloomy house?

Cecily herself did not know, the veiled old lady said she did not know, and it seemed for a time that Janet and Marcia would never be able to discover whether or not Cecily was related to the tragedy of the old lady's early life, and whether the twin bracelets held the key to the riddle.

Into the filigree design of the bracelets were woven Chinese characters, and the translation of these led the search on shipboard to far-away China and to still more mysterious events.

In "The Girl Next Door," Mrs. Seaman has written a story as perplexing and interesting as "The Boarded-up House" and "The Sapphire Signet." Janet, Marcia and Cecily will find a ready place in the friendship of every boy or girl who comes to know them, and when at last the mystery is solved every young reader will agree that the story ended just as one would wish it to end.

THE BOYS' BOOK OF SPORTS. Edited by Grantland Rice. 8vo, 400 pages. Profusely illustrated. Jacket in color. Price $2.00.

A treasury of instruction, entertainment, and inspiration on sports for every live American boy. The editing of this book by the "New York Tribune's" famous expert on sports is a guarantee that the contents are accurate and up to the last minute, and that everything is presented vigorously, accurately, and entertainingly.

The volume is a sort of boys' handbook of all the sports, rich in pointers on how to do things cleverly, and there is fascinating material in it for every red-blooded young American no matter what his special love among the sports may be. Moreover, the book will exert a wholesome tendency toward broadening and rounding out the athletic-minded boy of to-day.

Combined in this single volume are instructive, up-to-the minute articles on football, hockey, track athletics, baseball, golf, tennis, swimming, fishing, aquaplane riding, lacrosse, basket-ball; on the flying of model aëroplanes; etc., etc. In addition, there are thrilling stories of deeds and contests in the world of sports. The book is entertainingly and accurately illustrated.

Here is a book dealing with a rich but hitherto unexploited field of stirring life and incident, drawn from the author's personal experience while sojourning with her father's command in Borneo and the lower Philippine Islands. While the stories are fiction, all the adventures are based on fact, though most of them are of a truly thrilling nature and involve an almost incredible degree of daring: riding a cataract, for example, a crocodile fight, the capture of a huge python, an astonishing dive which discovers sunken gunboats, and other such perils of the jungle galore.

The actual life of the Moros is portrayed in these narratives, which form, indeed, the first authentic descriptions of the lower Philippines. And the novel pictures and strange scenes here set forth will interest and instruct adult readers as well as young folk. In addition to the author's first-hand knowledge, she has been allowed to inspect the War Department records of the early occupation of the islands, and has thus secured much additional material of great value in augmenting every American's interest in the far-away possessions which came to us through the Spanish war.

THE LOST LITTLE LADY. By Emilie Benson Knipe and Arthur Alden Knipe, authors of "Peg o' the Ring," etc. 12mo, 400 pages. 8 illustrations by Emilie Benson Knipe. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

It was during the war riots of 1863 that thirteen-year-old Nora O'Neil rescued a frightened little Southern girl from a mob of New York hoodlums. And because Nora was "a lonely bit of an Irish girl," who mothered every one, from her big rich father to Johnny Clancy, the newsboy, she took the "lost little lady" into her home and heart.

"Bébée," the strange child called herself; and though Nora was content with this, there were others who eagerly tried to learn her last name. Was she the Patricia Cochrane stolen from her Irish home, for whom Lady Castleton sought? Or the little daughter of Captain Dennis Burke, who was a Union man in a Southern state and scorned by his neighbors as a "renegade and a traitor"?

There is no end to the mysteries the story unfolds—of the hook-nosed Mr. Hitchens whose sinister influence drives Bébée from the home of those she loves; the theft of Mr. O'Neil's government papers, with suspicion falling on the Southern Bébée; and the fires started in the old Astor House, where the O'Neils lived.

The story keeps you guessing to the end and then treats you to a great surprise. Like every one who meets the warm-hearted Nora, you will fall captive to her quick generosity and her quaint humor. If you like a story about big-hearted, warm-blooded people, a story with a historical background, a story of mystery and unexpected climaxes, with an ending that is happy for every one concerned, "The Lost Little Lady" is the book you are seeking.

UNDER BOY SCOUT COLORS. By Joseph B. Ames. Approved by the Boy Scouts of America. 12mo, 400 pages, 8 illustrations by Walt Louderbach. Jacket in color. Price $1.35.

This fine story sets forth in a strong and vivid light the actual life of the great Boy Scout organization, and the effects upon its members of the discipline and useful knowledge which it supplies.

From the opening scene in which the young hero, through his quick wit and special Boy Scout knowledge, rescues a little lad from death by a broken electric wire, to the final instalment in which the whole local organization saves many lives at a time of sudden emergency, the story is a record of praiseworthy effort, of thrilling adventure, that will delight every boy-reader. It was written, moreover, under the special auspices of the American Boy Scout Organization.

WILDERNESS HONEY. By Frank Lillie Pollock. 12mo, 300 pages. 6 full-page illustrations by H. C. Edwards. Jacket in color. Price $1.25.

"Wilderness Honey!"—do you feel the magic of the words? Do they make you think of the wildest, roughest place you ever saw, fourteen miles back from a railroad, over a rocky trail? Do you see swarms of bees gathering honey from the basswood and the wild raspberry thickets? Can you imagine the exciting summer Alice Harman and her two brothers, Bob and Carl, spent when they staked all their small capital to prove that the bees would pay them thrice over?

There is no more fascinating subject than the honey-bee. So the Harmans found when they embarked upon their bee-keeping venture. The financial success of their scheme meant an electrical engineering course for Bob and a journalistic career for Carl. They had to succeed.

The wilderness held many an unguessed adventure for them, threatening disaster and sometimes death: a fight with a mad timber-wolf, for example, an escape from a wounded, infuriated bull-moose, an encounter with a black bear, and the enmity of Larue, the half-breed, whose drunken hatred started the forest fires. And always the bees—swarming, robbing, fighting, winging their way through the sunlight to gather the golden honey; guarding the Queen Bee, and protecting their hives from all invaders.

Here is a story of many fascinations; a story of adventure in the wilderness of northern Haliburton, in Canada; a story of bee-keeping, absorbing in its interest. It is a book every young person will want to read himself and lend to all his friends.

CAMP JOLLY. By Frances Little, author of "The Lady of the Decoration," etc. 12mo, 275 pages. 8 full-page illustrations by C. M. Relyea. Jacket in color. Price $1.25.

Just two men, three boys, and a dog, camping at the foot of the Colorado Canyon. Can you fancy any name more appropriate for their shack than "Camp Jolly"? And the story lives up to its name.

Mr. Hargrave was a "Secret Finder"; that is, he went about digging up secrets of how the world was made, to put them into books that read like romances. His son David, Billy his nephew, and their small negro chum Robert Lee Abe Lincoln George Washington Sherman—known for short as "Rags"—went with him and they hunted adventures, and found them aplenty. Wild-Cat Pete, their guide, did not need to search for adventures. Every day held many for him.

Just to read the chapter headings will make every boy and girl eager to devour this fascinating story. From "The Start" to "A Feast and Farewell," there isn't a page without its thrill. And between these chapters lies the story of "The Hotel and the Big Guide"; "A Terrible Sound"; "The Find"; "Shooting the Rapids"; "A Runaway Burro and a Flood"; "Goodbye, Canyon, Howd'ye Do, Indians," and other adventures.

THE GOLDEN EAGLE. By Allen French, author of "The Junior Cup," etc. 12mo, 250 pages. 8 full-page illustrations by C. M. Relyea. Jacket in color. Price $1.25.

An adventure story for boys and girls by the author of those popular books, "The Junior Cup," "The Runaway," etc. The scenes of his latest narrative are along the New England coast during the summer season, much of the spirited action taking place on a sailing boat.

The story is filled with the wholesome vigor and freshness of the sea. The characters, a group of unusually interesting boys and girls, are good to know; and the plot, involving a number of exciting situations, especially a thrilling boat race at the end, with a girl piloting what seemed a forlorn hope to victory, is tense and startling with surprises.

Mr. French, whose gift of swift narrative is well known, is at his best in "The Golden Eagle."

Its pictures are as charming as its stories and verses; and stories, verses, and illustrations combine to educate the child's esthetic nature."

By EDWIN F. BOWERS, M.D.

By GRACE M. BROWN

MENTAL HARMONY: Its Influence on Life. 12mo., Cloth, Net, $1.00

By GRACE M. BROWN

By CLIFFORD W. CHEASLEY

By A. FREDERICK COLLINS

SHORT CUTS IN FIGURES. 12mo., Cloth, Net, $1.00

Figuring is the key-note of business and a first aid to the memory. To figure easily, rapidly, and accurately, the work must be done by the most approved short-cut methods. Anyone who can do ordinary arithmetic can use them. And making use of them jacks up the power of your mind and hence multiplies your efficiency. This book tells just how it is done.

By MARVIN DANA, M.A., LL.B., Ph.D., F.R.G.S, etc.

A PERFECT MEMORY: How to Have and Keep It.
12mo., Cloth, Net, $1.00

Be a memory good or bad, anyone can improve it one thousand per cent.—or more—by following the methods set forth in this book. The instructions given are the simple and sane principles of mental control. A splendid memory is vital to achievement, vital to success.

By SEWELL FORD

WILT THOU, TORCHY. The volumes now published are: TORCHY; TRYING OUT TORCHY; ON WITH TORCHY; TORCHY, PRIVATE SEC. All illustrated. 12mo., Cloth, Each, Net, $1.35

Torchy, the youth with more intimate friends than any other in America. Have you ever tried to discover why Torchy is the most popular hero in American fiction? To say that he is the best beloved is merely another way of putting it. His rich, crisp humor, his cheery audacity, his sheer joy in meeting life's inevitable trouble—these help, of course, because they make him more interesting; but the real reason is his unselfish, whole-souled kindliness, and his entire competence in finding out the right thing to do and doing it. The combination of nobility of soul, hair-trigger intelligence and an unplumbed sense of humor is rare in this world. These things made TORCHY really great.

By SEWELL FORD

SHORTY McCABE ON THE JOB. 12mo., Cloth, Each, Net, $1.35

The dozen and a half episodes which Sewell Ford allows his hero to relate in "Shorty McCabe on the Job" are nearly all amusing and are variegated enough to be read consecutively with pleasure. Shorty's peculiar New Yorkese is kept up to date. He is engaged this time in seeing that a confidence man carries out honestly the philanthropic provisions of an eccentric will, but Mr. Ford has the sense not to stick to that ingenious mechanism. He branches out as he pleases, sometimes bringing in Shorty's friends of earlier tales and sometimes not. In one instance he holds forth on the immigrant question seriously, in another he sarcastically makes a man who is kind and pleasant to every one, an escaped lunatic. As a rule, however, the moral is to be found in Shorty's slang comments or in the story itself. A further chronicle of Shorty McCabe is published under the title of ODD NUMBERS.

By FRANK FROEST

THE MAELSTROM. 12mo., Cloth, Net, $1.25

Is as absorbing a detective story as the most alert reader of this class of story can possibly desire.

The situations are unusual and complex, and the final solution of the problem quite unexpected. A detective story par excellence.

THE MILLER "SILENT TIMES" SERIES

Bound in attractive style. 16mo. Per volume, net, $0.60.

Beauty of Every Day. By J. R. MILLER. A whole-souled argument showing how the common days may be made beautiful and giving advice on the true enlarging of life.

Building of Character. By J. R. MILLER. The most important work is not the making of a living, but the making of a life. These chapters carry suggestion and inspiration in this line.

Dr. Miller's Year Book. A passage for each day, with a verse of Scripture and some practical thoughts for life. Suited for devotional use.

Evening Thoughts. By J. R. MILLER. One-page talks based on selected verses of Scripture, which may be followed day by day as a brief evening devotion.

Every Day of Life. By J. R. MILLER. It is the every days that test us. This book shows how they may be made beautiful.

First Things First. By GEORGE JACKSON. Sixteen practical addresses, appealing to young men in the very lines where they most need help and guidance.

For the Best Things. By J. R. MILLER. Being good is not enough; striving to be better is not the loftiest aim. Nothing less than the highest and best should ever satisfy an immortal being.

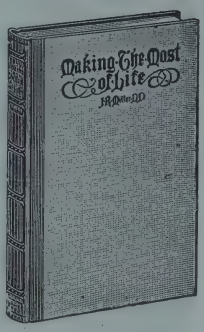
Gate Beautiful. By J. R. MILLER. Twenty chapters of an especially optimistic trend: "The Call to Praise," "The Desires of Thy Heart," "Called to be Saints," "Guarding our Thoughts," etc.

Gentleness of Jesus. By MARK GUY PEARSE. Seventeen brief sermons, written with grace and simplicity and full of sympathy and practical helpfulness.

Golden Gate of Prayer. By J. R. MILLER. Short studies on the Lord's Prayer, not theological, but practical and devotional treatments.

Heart Garden. By J. R. MILLER. The keynote is in the opening lines: "A good woman said, 'My heart is a little garden and God is planting flowers there.'"

Making of Manhood. By W. J. DAWSON. No better book could be put into the hands of a youth about to gird himself for the inevitable conflict with the world.



Making the Most of Life. By J. R. MILLER. Alexander said that Philip gave him life, but that Aristotle taught him how to make the most of his life.

Messages of the Masters. By A. H. BRADFORD. This sympathetic treatment of art masterpieces from a religious viewpoint is essentially new and of particular value.

Ministry of Comfort. By J. R. MILLER. Chapters on various phases of divine comfort. The volume is one that may be sent to those in sorrow.

Personal Friendships of Jesus. By J. R. MILLER. Christ's personal friendships are briefly delineated.

Silent Times. By J. R. MILLER. Named by Alice Freeman Palmer. The title was suggested by the "silent times" observed morning and evening in the college.

Story of a Busy Life. By J. R. MILLER. Mrs. Paull's short life was full of brilliant promise. The story is inspiring and helpful.

Strength and Beauty. By J. R. MILLER. No character is complete which does not combine strength and beauty. Strength without gentleness is brutal. Gentleness without strength is weakness.

Things to Live for. By J. R. MILLER. We ought to live for the best things. Just what those things are we ought to decide thoughtfully.

Wider Life. By J. R. MILLER. The call of Christianity is for men reaching up to their very best and out to their broadest.

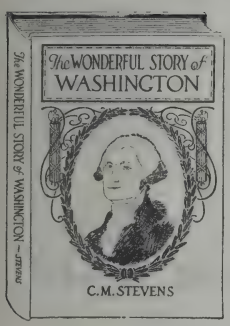
THE WONDERFUL STORY OF WASHINGTON

AND THE MEANING OF HIS LIFE FOR THE YOUTH AND PATRIOTISM OF AMERICA

By C. M. STEVENS

Author of "The Wonderful Story of Lincoln"



YOUTHFUL minds do not find their inspiration in Washington's generalship or statesmanship, because those great interests can be appreciated only by mature minds. Young people are inspired and encouraged as they learn how Washington dealt with incidents, difficulties and problems that promoted his ambition, ability and character, for the final tasks that ranked him among the greatest of Americans. This book tells the story of his early life and interprets the incidents in his career as they build up his patriotism and manhood for the making of America.

THE WONDERFUL STORY OF LINCOLN

AND THE MEANING OF HIS LIFE FOR THE YOUTH AND PATRIOTISM OF AMERICA

By C. M. STEVENS

Author of "The Wonderful Story of Washington"

THE making of the life of Lincoln represents, more than any other character in history, all the triumphs achieved in the experiences of all the people. His youthful struggle to be somebody worth while among men can never be reproduced by any other life in the same way, because the civilization in which he lived has vanished, but the spirit with which he overcame his difficulties and solved his problems is the ideal of American patriotism and the standard of unconquerable Manhood for America. Americans, natives or new-comers, cannot fully understand the "Spirit of America" until they appreciate the patriotism and character of Lincoln.

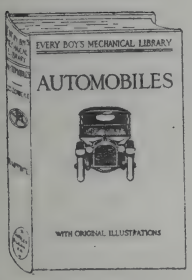
EVERY BOY'S MECHANICAL LIBRARY

By J. S. ZERBE, M. E.

HERE is a series dealing with mechanical subjects in which everybody is interested. Mr. J. S. Zerbe, being one of the foremost mechanical engineers of the day, is well qualified to write on such topics. These books, though written in a way that the boy can easily understand them, will be found of particular interest to grown-ups. Illustrated with scores of original drawings especially prepared to aid the reader.

12mo. Cloth. Illustrated. Price, per volume, 75 cents.

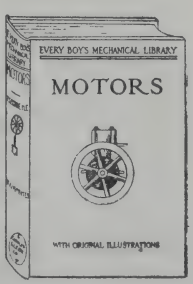
AUTOMOBILES



THIS is a subject in which every boy is interested. While few mechanics have the opportunity to actually build an automobile, it is the knowledge which he must acquire about every particular device used, that enables him to repair and put such machines in order. The aim of this book is to make the boy acquainted with each element, so that he may understand why it is made in that special way, and what the advantages and disadvantages are of the different types. To that end each structure is shown in detail as much as possible, and the parts separated so as to give a clear insight of the different functions, all of which are explained by original drawings specially prepared to aid the reader.

MOTORS

TO the boy who wants to know the theory and the practical working of the different kinds of motors, told in language which he can understand, and illustrated with clear and explicit drawings, this volume will be appreciated. It sets forth the groundwork on which power is based, and includes steam generators, and engines, as well as wind and water motors, and thoroughly describes the Internal Combustion Engine. It has special chapters on Carbureters, Ignition, and Electrical systems used, and particularly points out the parts and fittings required with all devices needed in enginry. It explains the value of compounding, condensing, pre-heating and expansion, together with the methods used to calculate and transmit power. Numerous original illustrations.



AEROPLANES

THIS work is not intended to set forth the exploits of aviators nor to give a history of the Art. It is a book of instructions intended to point out the theories of flying, as given by the pioneers, the practical application of power to the various flying structures; how they are built; the different methods of controlling them; the advantages and disadvantages of the types now in use; and suggestions as to the directions in which improvements are required. It distinctly points out wherein mechanical flight differs from bird flight, and what are the relations of shape, form, size and weight. It treats of kites, gliders and model aeroplanes, and has an interesting chapter on the aeroplane and its uses in the great war. All the illustrations have been specially prepared for the work.

A New Series for Boys

THE HARRY HARDING SERIES

By ALFRED RAYMOND

IN this series a distinctly new note has been struck. The trials and triumphs of Harry Harding and Teddy Burke, two wide-awake boys who make a humble beginning on the messenger force of a great department store, with the firm resolve to become successful business men, form a series of narratives calculated to please the alert, progressive boys of today. Humor, pathos and the actual adventure which may be found in any vast commercial establishment are so skillfully blended in these lively tales that the young reader will find himself completely absorbed in the doings of the two lads who become really heroes while performing their daily duties in a busy world of work.

Price per volume, 75 cents

1. HARRY HARDING; MESSENGER "45"

WHEN Harry Harding bravely decided to leave school in order to help his mother in the fight against poverty, he took his first long step towards successful manhood. How Harry chanced to meet mischievous, red-haired Teddy Burke who preferred work to school, how Teddy and Harry became messengers in Martin Brothers' Department store and what happened to them there, is a story that never flags in interest. Harry's early persecution at the hands of an unjust aisle-manager and the wonderful way in which he came into his own after the severest trial will arouse deep sympathy and compel ungrudging admiration for this honorable, high-minded little man. On the other hand, Teddy Burke's mirth-provoking adventures in the realm of house-furnishings will make an equally strong appeal to the average fun-loving boy, who, aside from his fun, dreams of the day when he, too, will take his place in the work-a-day world, perhaps to meet with even more stirring happenings than befell Harry Harding and Teddy Burke.

2. HARRY HARDING'S YEAR OF PROMISE

AFTER a blissful two weeks' vacation, spent together, Harry Harding and Teddy Burke again take up their work in Martin Brothers' store. Their "year of promise" brings them many new experiences, pleasant and unpleasant, but more determined than ever to reach the goal they have set for themselves, they pass courageously and hopefully over the rough places, meeting with the promotion of which they prove themselves worthy. They experience many surprises and exciting incidents which they meet in a way that advances them far on the road to success.

The cold pages and hard corners so objectionable in a paper book are quite absent and give place to a warm, cosy "feel" in a book which can be squeezed and cuddled without damage.

The same instinct which prompts a child to stroke an animal's furry coat will cause it to love a Dean's "Fluffidown" Rag Book (which is full of animals) more than any other.

As in the ordinary Dean's Rag Books, the colors are Fast, Washable and Hygienic, the books having been awarded the Silver Sealed Certificate of the Incorporated Institute of Hygiene, London (Eng.).

INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPÆDIA. THE NEW. Second Edition 1916. Edited by FRANK MOORE COLBY, M.A., and TALCOTT WILLIAMS, LL.D., L.H.D., Litt.D. Assisted by nearly 500 editors and contributors.

The new Second Edition now ready contains all the excellent features which at once made the first edition a Standard Authority in libraries and educational institutions throughout the country. To gain quick and reliable information regarding the work, there is no better way than to ask the librarian of your public library. He will tell you that while the first edition was more widely used than any other reference work, the Second Edition is in still greater demand. This edition is much more than a mere revision. It is practically a new work, for every article has been critically examined and enlarged when necessary or replaced by an entirely new article. The whole work has been reset from first to last, the page made somewhat larger, the number of volumes increased from 21 to 24 (including the Courses of Reading and Study) and printed from new plates on thin paper—not too thin, but making the volume easy to handle and to leaf, and although twenty per cent. of material has been added, the shelf-space occupied has been much reduced. The work contains about 80,000 articles (30,000 more than any other encyclopædia); there are 100 full-page color plates, 250 half-tone photographic reproductions, 450 duotints, making in all about 7,500 separate illustrations, besides about 20,000 text-cuts, charts and diagrams. The work is brought down to the closing months of 1916 and thus covers the new knowledge in which the past decade has been so fruitful. It also includes a 75-page article on the "War in Europe." The New International will be supplied either on regular paper or on special thin paper. Sold by subscription only. For particulars address our Subscription Department.

INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK, THE NEW.
A compendium of the world's progress in every department of human knowledge A special volume published in May of each year, beginning with 1907. For full particulars address Subscription Department.

MORRIS, A. T., and CARTON MOOREPARK

OLD FRIENDS AND NEW FABLES

The fables in which animals are the chief actors have never lost their savor. Other forms of literature have their brief periods of popularity, but the fable is evidently for all time. Perhaps it is the children themselves who have conferred this immortality upon the fable. They never grow tired of stories the characters in which consist of their old friends in the animal kingdom. That experienced and sympathetic writer, Alice Talwin Morris, has written a delightful set of new fables, which have been illustrated by Carton Moorepark, who may be said to have an international reputation for his treatment of animal and nature studies. This large book with its mounted colored illustrations and its interesting animal stories will appeal to children of all ages. Illustrated with 24 fully colored plates of animals by Carton Moorepark.

RANDALL, JOHN HERMAN

THE PHILOSOPHY OF POWER OR WHAT TO LIVE FOR

The demand of the 20th century is not so much for new beliefs as for actual knowledge. While there will always be a place in human life for speculative thought and as long as one thinks at all for one's self, he must formulate some philosophy of life, still what every man must live by is the knowledge born out of actual experience. With the crumbling of the old traditional creeds, there will continue to come ever new and fresh restatements of the basic truths of life. But the need of the hour is for a formulation of the practical principles which everyday experience has demonstrated to be most effective in bringing life to the fullness of all its latent powers.

In his new book, "The Philosophy of Power," Dr. Randall attempts such a formulation of principles, apart from all doctrinal questions of speculative interest. It might be regarded as the Creed of the practical man who cares little about theology or dogma, and yet who is conscious of a need of some practical working philosophy for life.

THE LIFE OF REALITY

In these days of great personal perplexities, and gigantic world-problems, every thoughtful man and woman is earnestly bent upon the search for reality. Out of the din of conflicting voices, out of the chaotic confusion of clashing opinions, one question emerges supreme over all. Amid all the deceptive appearances of life and in spite of life's disillusionments, is there such a thing as Reality, to which our human gropings may lead? Can it be found and experienced in the daily storm and stress of life, and if so, what is the pathway by which man may approach and live "the life that is life indeed"?

Dr. Randall firmly believes that such a real life is possible to every man, and in the chapters of this book he seeks to point out the sources and nature of that Reality for which, since the world began, every soul has been searching either consciously or unconsciously, the various paths experience through which one moves toward great discovery, and the resulting freedom power in the life of the individual, who attained the soul's supreme quest.

HUMANITY AT THE CROSS-ROAD

The writer believes that the true ideals of people grow out of its actual philosophy of and its conception of religion. Can religion regain its lost lea ship and give to the world the great ethical spiritual dynamic demanded in the new age dawning?

Penelope Donne is a lone little girl whose mother is dead and whose father is abroad. She lives with her father's brother and sister. Although everyone is extremely kind to her, nobody quite understands how much she wants somebody to play with who is not grown up. One day she meets, as she thinks, with the lady of the wishing stone, and asks her "to bring Daddy back, and to give her a magic carpet to take her everywhere, and a large family to play with." How her three wishes are granted, how she wanders about the country, not on a magic carpet, but in the company of a large family of cousins who are temporarily without a home, and finally meets her father, is told with many exciting details.

RENAISSANCE AND ITS MAKERS, THE

The purpose of this book is to lay before the eneral reader the main tendencies of the epoch nat laid the foundation of modern life and hought. It also serves as a guide to the best f the vast literature of the subject.

The Renaissance movement in Italy is traced o its source and the consequent progress throughut Europe is set out in the historical order. he story is not confined to the Revival of Learnng, but embraces its influence on Art, Philosophy, ocial Life and Character. An effort has been nade to focus in easy narrative the transition rom Mediævalism to Modernism, and give a uccinct account of the Fourteenth Century Revoution and its consequences for succeeding genrations. Beginning with St. Francis of Assisi, he story ends with Francis Bacon. The method episodic. We see the qualified Renaissance remonition in Dante, the last great Mediævalist; e observe the new spirit active in Petrarch, the rst great modern, and in his pupil, Boccaccio. Ve follow the Renaissance beyond the Alps, into ermany, where Renaissance becomes Reformaon; into the France of Rabelais, the Spain of ervantes, the England of Sir Thomas Moore.

The book is copiously and beautifully illustrated n color and black and white.

THE ENGLISH YEAR

"The English Year" is an endeavor to present by word and picture the meaning and savor of the months and seasons. Wind and rain and frost; birds and beasts and insects; grasses and mosses and trees; the stars, even the accidents of our almanacs, combine to give each month a very distinct character. Without in any way attempting to exhaust the category, the authors have described under each month what is most characteristic.

The series of beautiful plates from some of the choicest efforts of living English artists, combined with Mr. Seaby's delightful drawings (nearly 200 in number), go to make these volumes undoubtedly the most charming nature books ever published.

BOOKS AND PERSONS

Being Comments on a Past Epoch (1908-1911). 12mo, Net, $2.00

In The New Age Causeries during the years from 1908 to 1911 there wrote one Jacob Tonson. The initiated all along realized that Jacob Tonson was none other than Arnold Bennett in vacation mood. Quite recently Hugh Walpole exacted of his friend Bennett that these Causeries should find the permanency and the wider reading of book form. So Bennett yielded to the suggestion, insisting that only a selection be so issued. Walpole first selected—then Frank Swinnerton reviewed the selection and made slight additions—lastly Bennett himself reviewed and added triflingly—and this book is the product of the creative genius of Arnold Bennett and the selective discretion of Hugh Walpole and Frank Swinnerton.

Peoples and Countries at War

By the Author of I ACCUSE!

THE CRIME: A Supplement to I ACCUSE!

In Two Volumes. Octavo (——)

I ACCUSE! stands today the most famous of all books dealing with the war, because it was a concrete historical statement by a German of the responsibility for the beginning of the World War. In effect, it was the bill of particulars indicting his own country and denouncing its guilt. In the normal course of events there have been attempted refutations—there have been slanders innumerable aimed at many suspected authorships of this damning indictment. The Germans have made futile effort to purge themselves of the crime of having brought on the war—and this has constituted their defense.

Taking full account of all statements thus made, the author of I ACCUSE returns to the attack in THE CRIME, riddles German claims to exculpation—mercilessly he pursues the responsible heads—clearly and more clearly he fastens upon the German Government the responsibility of the greatest crime of all the ages—with vision and courage he denounces his country's guilt—he insists upon expiation, long and tedious though it may be, and the cross of responsibility shall hang upon the neck of Germany until that expiation be complete and the indemnity of the soul be paid. THE CRIME is a document as timely and as necessary as was I ACCUSE! It fastens upon Germany the double crime of premeditation and war—which is cold-blooded murder, the penalty for which is death—and death it shall be and must be.

By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

A HISTORY OF THE GREAT WAR--VOLUME TWO. THE BRITISH CAMPAIGN IN FRANCE AND FLANDERS—1915

Illustrated. Maps. Octavo, Net, $2.00

In his preface to this second volume, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says:—

"In the previous volume of this work, which dealt with the doings of the British Army in France and Flanders during the year 1914, I ventured to claim that a great deal of it was not only accurate but that it was very precisely correct in its detail. This claim has been made good, for although many military critics and many distinguished soldiers have read it there has been no instance up to date of any serious correction. Emboldened by this I am now putting forward an account of the doings of 1915, which will be equally detailed and, as I hope, equally accurate."

MY HOME IN THE FIELD OF MERCY

Illustrated from drawings by Charles Huard. 12mo, Net, $1.35

We are very glad to be able to announce for early publication a companion volume to MY HOME IN THE FIELD OF HONOUR, a book which will ever remain the standard and classic story of the retreat of the civil population at the Battle of The Marne. Frances Wilson Huard saw her chateau devastated and all the properties outraged by the attacking huns. Later she saw the retreat of these same huns and from the all but ruins of her beautiful home she has had the joy of establishing a refuge of mercy for wounded French soldiers, and by her own energy and persuasive force has secured funds for the maintenance of a hospital in her chateau. This book is the simple story of the work at Villiers—the tragedy and humour of hospital service and the glorious rehabilitation of "The Home in the Field of Honour."

THE GERMAN FURY IN BELGIUM

Experiences of a Netherlands Journalist During Four Months with the German Army in Belgium. Translated by C. Thieme, London correspondent of "De Nieuwe Courant." 12mo, Net, $1.00

"This book is written by a neutral, who held, at the start, no brief for either side—
"It is written by an eye-witness, who chronicles, not what he heard, but what he saw—
"It is written by one who mingled with the German troops and was present at the inception of the whole campaign of outrage."

—From the Preface by JOHN BUCHAN.

One grim and fateful conclusion is driven home by this narrative:—that Belgium today may be regarded as the mute witness of what Germany's triumph means for her victims.

Billy's Letters from Flanders. 12mo, Net, $1.00

These natural, spontaneous letters of a frank, stout-hearted Canadian boy beautifully reveal one of the most sacred relationships of life—a mother's love for her son, and a son's love for his mother.
"The unusual thing about this really great little book is that some alchemy of the human writer—a part of himself—is conveyed into the printed page—thus made far more real than any novelist's most perfect work."

By COLONEL F. McKELVEY BELL

THE FIRST CANADIANS IN FRANCE

Illustrated. 12mo, Net, $1.35

Attached to the first contingent of the Canadian Overseas as medical director, Colonel Bell had especially favorable opportunity of studying the Canadian soldier. His book is simple and colloquial—he uses the phraseology of the soldier boy—he enlivens his narrative by exact records of conversations and anecdotes. There is the story of departure and transport and arrival—the first days in camp—the amusing and entertaining "cards" among his shipmates. Then finally the Colonel strikes his real gait when he was detailed to found a Canadian hospital not far from Boulogne—how he prepared for and received the wounded—then the recital of the work of mercy and relief—a perfectly normal, natural story of what our own boys will experience as the months go by.

By MRS. ST. CLAIR STOBART

THE FLAMING SWORD, In Serbia and Elsewhere

Fully illustrated with photographs. 12mo, Net, $1.75

Mrs. Stobart, alternately known as "The Lady of the Black Horse" and "The Florence Nightingale of the Great War," was the first woman in history to mobilize and command a field hospital in war. She deals with the great problems of mercy work and gives to the world a marvelous record of what one woman has accomplished—an example of what our women may do. This intimate, illuminating narrative cannot fail vitally to interest American women in the crises and opportunities of these days.

An Historical Record, with Maps. 12mo, Net, $1.00

It is high time that the American people understood the real truth of German brutality and bestiality in Belgium.
And it is quite possible to present the truth as it has now been co-ordinated from the evidence on both sides.
Professor Toynbee, a scholar, with a scholar's clarity and restraint, has drawn out of the great mass of testimony a narrative altogether unique in the bibliography of the war.

SALUTE TO ADVENTURERS

12mo, Net, $1.35

John Buchan, publisher, author, historian, statesman, and now Colonel in His Majesty's Army, is among the most virile men of his day. He finds relaxation and recreation in giving full play to a fertile imagination and fortunately for a tired world he makes record of these imaginings, so that readers everywhere may revel in the thrill of adventure and romance which his master-mind creates.

SALUTE TO ADVENTURERS is another galloping tale running the gamut from the quiet Pentland Hills of Scotland to Jamestown and the Shenandoah Valley in early Colonial days. It is peopled by buccaneers, fanatics, preachers, swordsmen, Indians, escaped slaves—a whole whirl of animation and roystering spirits unbridled—the sort of book that forbids thought of care and for the nonce drives war and rumors of war to oblivion—that rests one's soul by the very violence of its incident.

THE GREEN MIRROR:

The second volume in the Trilogy THE RISING CITY, to which A PRELUDE TO ADVENTURE is a prologue and THE DUCHESS OF WREXE is the first volume. 12mo, Net, $1.50

Came with young love, with the intrusion of live arranged in another pattern than that reflected in the Mirror. And one day the Mirror was shattered and carried away.

Hugh Walpole here interprets the problem of the Younger Generation showing how Youth and Love must inevitably shatter the Mirror of family pride, selfish possession.

SECRET BREAD

12mo, Net, $1.50

Miss Tennyson-Jesse has spread a broad canvas for this most ambitious of her books. And she has filled the canvas with rich color and cameo-like detail. The theme is the passion for possession, for ownership, whether it be of lands or things or other lives. It is generously planned—its subject is not so much the life of her character as it is of human life itself. It is not a pretty romance, this SECRET BREAD, but by the same token it is a brave one and a strong one. This is not a book for him who would be merely idly entertained. There is lust in the tale and blood and brutality and cruelty—just as there are these elements in life. And the art of Miss Jesse holds the interest of the reader and revitalizes that interest in love and life and death.

SONIA: Between Two Worlds

A Novel. 12mo, Net, $1.50

SONIA is the daughter in an English home who looks out upon the world of London in the days preceding the war—the cabarets, the night clubs, the world as it came within her horizon, run riot in pursuit of pleasure and lust for excitement. Then came the chastening days of war, when the soul of the nation and the souls of the people are stirred to sacrifice and reality. Then the vision of the New Earth that is to be—when from the ashes of their dead sons will arise a great new entente—a brotherhood of men forever liberated from the bondage and peonage of the selfishness of autocrats or the autocracy of self. The book is a drama of passionate intensity—the interpretation of a great drama in which we must all take a part—in which we are even now taking a part.

Can a bad man, masquerading as a good man, become so imbued with the spirit of his impersonation that he himself becomes good?

Does a woman love the character of the role a man is playing or through the mask does she love the man? It is this baffling situation which Packar dunravels with great skill.

THE LADY OF KINGDOMS

12mo, Net, $1.50

A courageous novel dealing with the lives of two women, intimately, understandingly, fearlessly. These two women were threatened with hopeless spinsterhood in the narrow confines of a typical small American village. But they revolt in time and adventure into a wider life.

The one naturally endowed with sex attraction remains indifferent to the natural desire for marriage and maternity; the other, denied the attracting graces of femininity, yearns for her own child. The successful working out of these two correlated problems has given Mrs. Irwin her opportunity to which she rises in the writing of this compelling novel—one which even a decade ago would have been reckoned too revolutionary for acceptance.

THE KEYS OF HEAVEN

12mo, Net, $1.50

Was woman intended to be the chatelaine of man's dreams and ideals, his loftiest visions and aspirations—the guardian of the best that is in him? Has she failed in her appointed task? And must we look to her for the renaissance of true beauty, art, romance, and the higher spirituality?

These are some of the questions Miss Laughlin raises—and answers—in THE KEYS OF HEAVEN. It is more than a romance; it goes to the very heart of the heart of all romances. It is spiritual, idealistic; a novel in which dreams play a vital part, but in which, likewise, the solid hard brutal facts of existence are faced relentlessly, and above all it is intensely human.

THE TORTOISE is another of those exquisite pieces of writing which have come to expect from the pen of the author of DODO and DAV BLAIZE and MICHAEL.

This is a story of Sussex gentlefolk—polite, well-bred, well-mannered, l human; of the repressed, denied and defeated ambitions and emotions a middle-aged male and two middle-aged females; of the satisfied love o certain arrogant young Robin and his Rosemary; of the mischievous a selfish domination of a peevish and querulous old lady who all but anni lates her only begotten son with too much mothering.

The "scarlet ghost" which drags some women—and men—down, down—is simply Karma, and Karma must be slain if one is to find life eternal. Mr. Sheehan has accomplished the difficult task of expressing in a story of wide and general appeal the basic principles of reincarnation and the message which it has for the world today. Seldom has a spiritual message had such a garment of pure and absorbing romance; seldom has the material and the spiritual been more ably coupled.

The somber and repelling is redeemed by a quaint whimsicality which runs riot in the humorous tales, lightens the shadows, and intensifies the pathos and heroism of his dramas.

"Sapper" has fought—and is still fighting. Endowed with a vivid imagination and a perception keen and receptive, he sees the Tommies and the Poilus as he later will see the Sammees who as the great army of heroes are fighting and sacrificing—and ever and anon pausing to pray—that the great cause may be won and a victory with peace achieved.

GASTON OLAF, lumberjack and big out-of-doors man generally, finds himself at the parting of the ways. Shall he follow that new love which has come to his heart or shall the call of the wild and the wanderlust prevail? There comes to him that chivalry which is the heritage of every full-blooded man and because the maid of his choice is wanted and needed more urgently by his mate he yields his heart, but emerges a bigger and truer man.

THIS COUNTRY OF OURS: THE STORY OF THE UNITED STATES

Octavo, Net, $2.50

These are days when children should be reading most carefully the history of their own country. American children particularly should be studying most thoughtfully the grand traditions of the United States. From 1776 onward there is the glorious story of liberty and freedom—the development of democracy and the advancement of good government. In fact, there has been no time in the history of our own country when children, and grown-ups as well for that matter, should more seriously take account of their heritage—should realize through what travail their forefathers passed that this country should be free and permanently free. That such a study and review be rendered interesting and alluring—that history be made instructive yet romantic—this is the task that H. E. Marshall has once again successfully accomplished in THIS COUNTRY OF OURS—an accurate, painstaking, fascinating book that is at once story and history—that becomes an inspiration to youth to cherish those ideals we have attained and to see to it that they are preserved that their children may read of the glorious achievements of the children of these days.

Georgia McNally learned of wild beasts intimately and accurately. There can be no doubt of the reliability of her facts—a feature of no small importance to parents who would intrust their children to the knowledge of this book.

First of all Mrs. McNally studied father and mother animals—then came her understanding of the baby animals.

Her facts and her pictures have been acquired at first hand and she has assembled and related these facts in a way at once to attract and instruct the child.

The Synoptics are harmonized, while the Gospel of Joh given by itself with the fullest possible cross reference to the Synopt Passages which are similar, but not actually parallel, are given in fo notes. As most of the teaching of the Synoptics is done through medium of an English rather than a Greek harmony, a volume has b produced here which commands the serious attention of every New Tes ment student.

Cecilia is a daughter of the tenements, a loyal little Irish girl, left alone to be "mother an' all" to a small brother and a big, lonely laborer father. Wealth undreamed-of comes to them, and the funny, crude little girl is sent away to "learn to be a lady." The story of the years that follow, of her amusing mistakes and sore perplexities, of her gradual development into an exquisite woman, seeing things as they are, yet loyal first to father, then to brother, and at last to the man she loves—this is but the frame-work of a book of rarest sweetness and charm.

Lilla: A Part of Her Life

With Picture Jacket in Color by B. Cory Kilvert. 12mo. Net $1.35

Once more Mrs. Belloc Lowndes exhibits her incomparable balance of taste and lucidity of judgment in the handling of her characters. From the moment the man meets the woman at midnight in the train, darkened for reasons of military necessity, until the climax is reached in one of the most dramatic and tragic episodes in the career of one of the world's great heroes—this book moves through a problem of mating and mismating with a cool restraint and a complete understanding of human nature.

The Matchmakers

With Jacket in Color and Decorative End-papers by Frances Rogers
12mo. Net $1.35

Drowsy was Little Pendleton. Smoke rose in dreamy spirals from the chimneys of thatched cottages; in the church tower rooks cawed lazily; and over the placid countryside lay the mellow sunshine. Yet the plodding folk in this world of fields and streams were eager with human drama. Winsome Peggy, the Rector's daughter, loved to "pull the strings" of life in the little town. And one day all the village, from the sullen butcher to the avaricious Lord of the Manor, turned matchmakers in revenge. The spectacle of all these busy, honest workers at cross purposes is filled with comedy and a very human tenderness.

The Wonder

Net $1.4(

In this uncanny concept of a child whose mental capabilities possessed no limitations the creator of "Jacob Stahl" crosses the border-land into a realm that has fascinated scientists and philosophers for generations. The tiny, awe-inspiring figure of the Wonder, traversing the great library like some curious, persistent moth, devouring one by one all the dry leaves of Knowledge—eventually solving the very Riddle of the Universe—surely this is the most original conception any novelist has given us in years! It is worthy of note that Beresford's craftmanship has proved quite equal to the difficulties of this extraordinary theme.

The Chaste Wife

12mo. Net $1.50

Marriage or happiness—or both! Mr. Swinnerton, whose frank realism has often been compared to that of Gissing, finds the secret in a single word: Truth. Priscilla Evandene was happy, though Stephen earned a small pittance. Love, and utter confidence, kept her happy. But Stephen had to have his secret, as so many men do. And when Priscilla's confidence deserted her, love threatened to go, too! The whole perplexing problem of marital felicity is stripped of its wrappings in this tale of love's triumph over a man's mistaken idea of "kindness to his wife."
